$30,000,000 GIRL DECIDES TO WED A YALE STUDENT

Miss Catherine Barker, who inherited $30,000,000 from her father, John H. Barker.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Miss Catherine Barker, worth $30,000,000, will marry Howard H. Spaulding, Jr., on July 31, according to an announcement made today by her guardian, James B. Forgan.

This announcement effectually dissipates the hopes that have been in the breasts of many titled suitors that they would be the lucky ones to share the Barker millions.

For a long time there have been rumors that Miss Barker had made up her mind that an American husband was good enough for her. The rumors were confirmed when the engagement to young Spaulding was announced last Winter.

There were however, some who were still skeptical and who did not believe that an American girl, of her wealth and beauty would content herself with a mere American for a life partner. The skeptics were crushed when today the actual date and plans for the ceremony were made public.

Miss Barker is nineteen years old and the only daughter of the late John H. Barker, who amassed a fortune estimated at over $30,000,000 as head of the Haskell & Barker Car Company of Michigan City, Ind.

Since Miss Barker made her debut dukes, marquises, earls and even princes have sought her hand. The young girl has been zealously shielded from fortune hunters, titled or otherwise, but notwithstanding at least one prince, Principino Di Sant Margherite, ran the gauntlet and for a time was looked upon as the lucky man. It was at this time that Miss Barker was reputed to have said "an American husband is good enough for me." The court granted Miss Barker the sum of $50,000 a year to live on.

Howard H. Spaulding, Jr., is a sophomore at Yale. He comes of a well-known family, but is said to be of moderate means. The wedding will take place on July 31 at the Barker Summer home, Marlboro Point, Mich.

MEXICANS FIRE ON U. S. NAVY OFFICER

By International News Service.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 2.—Positive information that twelve Americans had been killed by Mexicans in the vicinity of Tampico was brought to Houghton by Captain Oscar Kane, commander of the tank steamer Winifred, which docked at Lynchberg with a cargo of oil for the Gulf Refining Company.

"Lieutenant Green, of the United States Navy, attached to the United States cruiser Sacramento, was fired upon by Mexicans and he went to the Panuco Oil fields in a launch to investigate the assassinations of one of the Americans," Captain Kane said.

"Green was accompanied on the launch by the American consul from Tampico. Their launch was flying the United States colors at the stern and a white flag at the bow. Bullets passed through Green's hat and grazed his head.

"The launch was immediately headed ashore, where a party of Villa

INQUIRY ON LUSITANIA EVIDENCE

By A. M. JAMIESON,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 3—The administration today started a quiet investigation into the character of the individuals and the testimony they presented in their affidavits filed with the State Department alleging that the Lusitania carried guns concealed under her decks. It was understood to be preparing to demolish this testimony, which was presented by Germany to show that the liner was a man-of-war and not a merchantman when she was torpedoed by a German submarine.

There was a well defined difference of opinion in administration and diplomatic circles as to the effect these affidavits would have on the rejoinder President Wilson will make to the German reply to his Lusitania note. It is generally believed, however, that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, in his interview yesterday with the chief executive referred to these affidavits as a base for Germany's request for an investigation of the facts as to the character of the Lusitania.

Ground for this belief is found in the admission by Secretary Bryan, some time after this interview, that the affaidavits were in the department, and the hurried efforts of department officials to send them to the President. Some of these diplomats take the position that these affidavits bring the question of "facts" so strongly that the United States cannot ignore them, no matter how much stress the administration places on the humanitarian side of the question.

"TECHNICALLY WARNED."

On the other hand, officials of the State Department, who have seen the affidavits, privately expressed confidence that they could not be taken as disproving the official statements of the government inspectors, whose duty it was to search for guns and who have reported that the Luisitania carried no such weapons, either mounted or unmounted.

Counsellor Lansing of the State Department stated that the charges made in the affidavits were being investigated by Treasury officials and the Department of Justice. He intimated, however, that the State Department was convinced before President Wilson's first note to Germany

BANKS TRY TO UPSET N. H. VETO

Resorting to the time-worn form of lobbying, the savings banks of the State, financially interested in New Haven securities, flooded the Legislature today with telegrams, in a concerted attempt to pass the New Haven bills over the Governor's veto.

Scores of legislators said they received the telegrams either at their homes, last night, or at the State House today.

The fact that the language in the telegrams is almost identical [illegible] indicates that they all came from the same source. The telegrams read:

"It would seem that changes in veto message would [illegible] outstanding New Haven bonds in doubtful legal status which are at present in excess of capital stock and that the protection of depositors in savings banks either the form of the bill as passed should be adhered to or [illegible] legislation [illegible] to legal [illegible] should be passed."

The telegrams are signed by banks which constitute one great chain operated from Boston, it is said.

As further evidence of the campaign to pass the bills over the veto, Representative John H. Sherburne of Brookline, the Republican "whip," spoke in the House today of the delay in prorogation, attributing the delay to the "Governor." He had previously referred to the Public Service Commission, which prepared the new New Haven bills, at the request of the Governor.

While Mr. Sherburne was unloading himself of his speech in the House, Senator Hobbs of Worcester, Republican chairman of the Committee on Railroads, was telling the Senate that the differences between the Governor and the Legislature on the New Haven bills were being amicably adjusted and that satisfactory bills would be reported later in the day. Democratic leaders charged that the Sherburne speech was delivered with the purpose of inciting a feeling antagonistic to the Governor, who vetoed both bills passed by the legislature.

Conferences were resumed today at the State House between the Public Service Commission and the Committee on Railroads on the forms of bills recommended by the Governor.

With reference to the telegrams members of the Public Service Commission denied absolutely that the Governor's bill would impair the value of New Haven stocks and bonds issued in excess of the New Haven's capital stock.

DR. TURNER GUILTY ON 2D TRIAL

Dr. Augustus W. Turner, with an office on Massachusetts avenue, Boston, was today found guilty by a jury in Judge Callahan's session at the Suffolk Superior Court of performing an illegal operation which caused the death of Miss Irene A. Richardson on January 7.

Miss Richardson was the daughter of [illegible] Richardson, a town official in Arlington. Just before she died she stated that Dr. Turner treated her and that William Hyde, a married man with two children, was responsible for her trouble.

This was Turner's second trial. The first jury disagreed. He will be sentenced later. Hyde [illegible] in court at both trials, but was not called as a witness. The Grand Jury reported "no bill" in his case.

Dr. Turner figured in the same court fourteen years ago with Mrs. Jane E. Bishop. At that time he had apartments on West Springfield street. He was charged with aiding Mrs. Bishop in a number of illegal cases. Mrs. Bishop had been arrested two months previously and held in $10,000 bail. TEUTONS WIN GREAT VICTORY

By STEVEN BURNETT.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

VIENNA, June 3.—The Galician stronghold of Przemysl, which was captured from the Austrians by a Russian army in March after a five months' siege, has been recaptured by the Austro-German forces, it is officially announced.

This is the greatest victory won by the Austro-German forces since General Von Mackensen launched his mighty offensive movement against the Russians along the Dunejec river line in northern Galicia six weeks ago.

The official announcement was brief. It said:

"Przemysl was retaken by us today."

Previously it had been officially announced that the Austro-German forces of General Mackensen had stormed four of the Russian forts north and northeast of the city.

It is announced that the Auswas satisfied with the view that the Lusitania technically was an unarmed merchantman.

LANSING'S STATEMENT.

"The character of the Lusitania was determined to a large extent," he said, "by the fact of her carrying passengers. No vessel with passengers aboard is likely to go out in said commerce. So far as the department was advised, and it had advices, no guns of either a defensive or offensive character were carried aboard her. We shall investigate the facts, of course, whether these facts are relevant or not."

The counsellor recalled that the steamship Adriatic on one of her trips carried two guns which the federal inspectors at New York decided were defensive. These guns were taken off when she reached England. Another merchantman arrived in Philadelphia with four guns aboard. These were taken off voluntarily by her owners. The United States inspectors at all American ports have undertaken since last September to see that no merchantmen left America carrying offensive armament.

The department refuses to make public the text of the affidavits pending the investigation, but its attitude today indicated a determination to insist that even were the Lusitania armed, she was armed only for proper defence.

VON BERNSTORFF SILENT.

"I have just told the Secretary of State that whatever he may hear he may be sure that I have done absolutely no talking and that if any one has been talking it is some one other than myself."

Count von Bernstorff today made this statement after a brief conference with Secretary Bryan. He referred to his conversation yesterday with President Wilson.

THINK GERMANY MAY YIELD.

A more optimistic feeling regarding the German crisis prevailed here today as a result of the interview between President Wilson and Count von Bernstorff.

While the United States is not expected to yield on its previously announced position, the belief in official and diplomatic quarters was that the German ambassador's report of the interview to Berlin would have a conciliatory effect upon that government and bring the prompt and direct agreement sought by the United States to adhere to the principles of international law.

President Wilson today continued the task of framing the rejoinder of this government to the unsatisfactory note recently transmitted by Germany. It is expected that this communication will be ready for submission to the Cabinet tomorrow, and will be dispatched to Berlin tomorrow night or Saturday.

The note, which will be brief and to the point, insisting strongly that Germany give a direct answer regarding her intention to observe the principles of international law on the high seas and cease the destruction of neutrals with Americans aboard, may be made public when transmitted, but it is more likely it will not be given out here until it has been received in Berlin.

TO BE NO BACK-DOWN.

President Wilson and other high officials have not disclosed the probable contents of the note now in preparation, and its actual language so far is known only to the executive.

It was learned, however, from those familiar with the President's views that there is to be no back down whatever on the part of the United States.

In fact, it is understood that the second American note will endeavor to convince Germany that while America wishes the friendly relations between the two countries to continue, this government must have, forthwith, an announcement from the Kaiser's government outlining its future course in the matter of its submarine warfare and protection of Americans aboard neutral ships in Germany's so-called "war zone."

Reparation in the cases which already have arisen, including the Lusitania, is to be insisted upon, together with a disavowal of a deliberate attack upon the Lusitania.

Comment in official circles today concerned chiefly the possible outcome of the Wilson-Bernstorff conference. This interview was sought by the German ambassador, and the impression conveyed at the embassy was that it was in the interest of peace and an understanding between the two nations in the present crisis.

At this interview it was possible to thrust aside the red tape phrases of statecraft and to engage in a direct man-to-man interchange of views. It is not doubted that the President spoke his mind freely and frankly.

The United States is insisting upon the recognition by Germany of a principle, rather than an extended diplomatic discussion of facts concerning the Lusitania.

The meeting between the German ambassador and the President was the first sought by the representative of the German government since his return to this country just after the beginning of the war, when he called to pay his respects. The meeting was attended with considerable ceremony.

Ambassador Von Bernstorff made no statement after his interview with the President. According to one correspondent, however, these are the details of the statement made by Ambassador Von Bernstorff to President Wilson yesterday.

GERMAN CONCESSIONS.

After describing the difficulty he had encountered in trying to communicate with the German government, he added that, if it had not been for these conditions, the German note would have gone more thoroughly into the questions at issue, but that he had been unable to properly acquaint his government with the real sentiment in this country before the note was sent.

He expressed his conviction that, if time permitted before the President's reply, he would be able to secure from the Imperial German government the following concessions to American sentiment:

First—That Germany is willing to discontinue its submarine attacks on vessels aboard which there are known to be citizens of the United States, if the United States government on the other hand will suggest to citizens of the United States that in the future when taking passage for Europe they should travel only on ships known not to be carrying contraband of war.

Second—That the Imperial German government will not attack merchant vessels of any country with submarines until such vessels are positively known to be carrying contraband of war.

WOULD GIVE WARNING.

Third—That Germany's course will be made much easier in this direction if the President will issue a proclamation stating that ships of belligerent nations carrying contraband of war must not accept United States citizens as passengers. In that event Germany will be able to conduct her submarine warfare in the future without coming into any conflict whatever with the United States.

Fourth—That Germany would agree, providing the United States government brought about the conditions outlined above, not to attack by submarine any merchant vessel whatever, belligerent or otherwise, traveling the high seas with passengers whether one carrying contraband of war or not without first giving passengers and crew an opportunity of seeking safety in boats and rafts.

In view of the difficulties which the German Embassy has experienced in communicating with Berlin on account of the cutting of cables, it is understood the President granted a request of the Ambassador that the United States assist him in transmitting his messages concerning the delicate situation that has arisen.

The Ambassador's report of his talk with the President will be sent in code through the State Department and will be delivered by Ambassador Gerard.

The officials of the government and the general public are waiting expectantly upon the American developments in the exchange of notes between Germany and the United States respecting the Lusitania—expectancy which is deepened by the fact that no trustworthy indications regarding the American attitude on the German answer are yet available here.

WOULD AVOID TENSION.

Reports which reach the newspapers are regarded with suspicion, not only because they come exclusively through British channels, but on account of their contradictory character.

One set of reports intimates that the German counter-proposals have been found to harmonize with Mr. Bryan's plan of providing for a period of investigation in cases of international conflict, while other advices reproduce various American editorials, declaring that the German note is utterly unacceptable, and demanding that steps of varying degrees of aggressiveness be taken.

While waiting, the time is being utilized by some of the more aggressive German newspapers and writers of the type of Reventlow to launch abusive articles against the United States and President Wilson's policy, but the press and public generally seem desirous of avoiding anything which might increase the tension between the two governments while the German note is under consideration.

In this they are acting in complete accord with the Foreign Office, which apparently is sincerely anxious to preserve friendly relations with the United States and deprecates any publication which would tend to inflame the feelings either in Germany or America.

Secretary Bryan, After Denial, Finally Admits Lusitania Affidavits

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The State Department was deeply stirred by the revelation in the AMERICAN that Secretary Bryan had received four affidavits declaring the Lusitania was armed.

Secretary Bryan discovered these affidavits and admitted their existence twelve hours after the AMERICAN had given the news to President Wilson and the Washington public.

Early in the day Secretary Bryan had denied that the affidavits had been received. His later admission was made to thirty-five correspondents of the morning newspapers.

One of the four affidavits submitted to the State Department is by Gustave Stahle of No. 20 Leroy street, New York city. He swears:

> On the day prior to the sailing of the Lusitania I was asked by my friend, A. Leitch, who was employed as first cabin steward, to help him bring his trunk aboard. In the course of the evening we went on board without being hindered by the quartermaster on guard.
> After having remained some time in the "Gloria" (stewards' quarters) we went to the stern main deck. About fifteen to eighteen feet from the entrance to the "Gloria" on port and starboard respectively I saw two guns of twelve to fifteen centimeters. They were covered with leather, but the barrels were distinctly to be seen.
> To satisfy my curiosity, I unfastened the buckles to ascertain the calibre of the guns. I could also ascertain that the guns were mounted on deck on wooden blocks. The guns were placed about three feet from the respective ship sides and the wall could be removed at that particular place.
> On the foredeck there were also two guns of the same calibre and covered in the same manner. They were placed at about ten to twenty feet from the entrance of the crew's quarters and four feet from the ship side where the wall could also be removed.

Josephine Weir of New York swears that when she warned Leitch against sailing on the Lusitania he said: "Oh, I'm not afraid, we have four big, brightly-polished copper guns."

A man named Grieve deposes he heard Leitch make the remark. In the fourth affidavit an American named Bruckner swears he saw a cannon on the Lusitania.

RUSSIANS ADMIT FURTHER LOSSES

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 3.—Using their great sixteen-inch mortars, the Austro-German troops east of the San River in Galicia have bombarded the stronghold of Przemysl, it is officially announced by the Russian War Office.

The capture of guns from the Russian defenders in the forts north of Przemysl is admitted. A success for the Austro-German forces in the region of Stryj is also admitted.

Along the lower San River the Russians continue to gain ground south of Kalnikouve. They captured 1,200 Austro-German soldiers, including twenty-two officers and eight quick-firing guns.

The text of the official statement follows:

"In the region of Shavli-Szwale we successfully repulsed several attacks of the enemy and captured a redoubt east of the village of Travliany. On the Narew front, to the left of the Vistula, the enemy delivered with small forces several attacks which we repulsed throughout the day.

"On the front between the Vistula and Przemysl very stubborn fighting has developed. We gained a somewhat important success on the lower San River, taking several villages, some of them at the point of the bayonet.

"On the right bank of the San we gained a village, which point we are making our base of operations in that area. South of the village we captured 1,200 prisoners, among them twenty-two officers and eight quick-firing guns."

Following the issuance of the regular report the following important supplemental information was given out:

"Przemysl has been bombarded with guns ranging up to 16-inch calibre. The enemy delivered his principal attack against the northern front, in the region of forts No. 1 and No. 11, which the Austrians had almost completely demolished before they surrendered the fortresses to the Russians in March. Although we repulsed these attacks the enemy took several of our guns. We bombarded the charging columns of the enemy until the men were up to the very muzzles of the cannon, and then having expended all our artillery ammunition, had to give up the pieces."

PRZEMYSL FALLS TO THE TEUTONS

tro-German loss of life was heavy, for whole regiments of infantry were hurled against the strong Russian defences. Both the city and the forts surrounding it had been battered by a long and tremendous bombardment from 12, 14 and 15-inch howitzers. The Russians fought bravely, but lacked artillery ammunition.

Following the mighty night and day cannonade, the Austrians and Germans swept forward in a great bayonet charge. Many Russians are reported to have been captured as well as a vast quantity of supplies.

RUSSIANS IN RETREAT.

The remnants of the Russian army at Przemysl are unofficially reported to be in retreat toward the east. The Austro-German forces are now ready to launch a great drive for the recapture of Lemberg, the only remaining city of importance held by the Russians in Galicia.

Military experts rank the Austro-German offensive in Northern Galicia, which has been crowned by the magnificent victory at Przemysl, as one of the greatest exploits of the war in any theatre of hostilities.

Przemysl fell into the hands of the Russians on March 22 after a siege of about six months.

Many of the forts defending Przemysl had been practically destroyed by the Austrians before surrendering the stronghold, and the Russians did not have time to repair them before the Austro-German army arrived in front of the city and began its attacks upon the defences.

The Germans showed marvelous efficiency in moving their heavy 42-centimetre guns forward, over bad roads in time to take part in the climacteric stage of the assault.

Przemysl is an important railway centre. Lines run from that city north to Jaroslau, east to Lemberg and southwest into the Carpathian mountain passes and to Sambor.

The Austro-German forces entered Przemysl at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

RELEASES BIG ARMY.

The capture of Przemysl releases a huge Austro-German force for operations against the Russians along the lower valley of the San River. It is estimated that the Russian army of defence numbered close to 250,000 men, but all were not in the city. The Russian line extended toward the east for the protection of the Lemberg railway.

There were 120,000 Russians in the army which captured Przemysl from General Kusmanek's Austrian army last March.

HELEN KELLER REFUSES MORMON

Helen Keller, the girl known to all the world through her wonderful fight from her world of total darkness and total silence, into the world of more fortunate beings, has just returned to her cottage at Wrentham after a five-months' tour of the United States which had for its climax inspection of the fair in California and an offer of marriage from a Mormon.

Of all her trip she declared that the visit to the exposition held for her the most charm, even though her impressions of the wonderful spectacle there, had to be translated to her mind in terms of the expressions of others and especially by the senses remaining to her, of smell and feeling. Years of straining to receive these impressions by her narrowed means have made wonderfully acute both senses of smell and feeling.

MRS. MACY 'MIRACLE WORKER.'

With Miss Keller is Mrs. John A. Macy, who has had charge of her education since she was six years old. It is this Mrs. Macy who has been called the "miracle worker" on account of the success she has had in enlarging the world for her pupil. It is Mrs. Macy that introduces you to Miss Keller, telling her sensitive fingers, in a deaf-alphabet talk, just what you look like, and what it is you desire.

Helen Keller, associated in so many minds with a mental picture of a frail, wistful slip of a girl, pitiable on account of her misfortunes, is really a rugged, athletic type, tall in a vigorous way, with broad shoulders, and just now wearing a healthy normal streak of sunburn on her nose.

"Was not your trip a very stirring experience?" Mrs. Macy asked Miss Keller, translating the question into their alphabet for the reporter.

"No," she answered slowly, giving the impression that her words had been carefully thought out, but without the usual harsh note expected in the talk of deaf persons.

GLIMPSES OF NEW WORLDS.

"I am tired now, of course," she said, "but it is worth it. It is a great deal of fun. I get glimpses of new worlds, and I meet many friends.

"The audiences are my friends. I can feel them. I can feel that they are sympathetic. I can feel when they laugh, and I know when they applaud.

"The exposition I liked best. I could feel that I was in Africa, in Asia. I felt the wonderful California sunshine; I smelled the glorious flowers, and I could feel the glorious sculptures. They let me put my fingers over it, you see," she explained with a smile. "And the best, the very best thing, was the statue by Cyrus Dallin, that 'Invocation to the Great Spirit.'"

REFUSED A MORMON.

Explaining her lectures, she said:

"I give my lecture and after it they ask me questions. Out in Salt Lake City one Mormon asked me if I would be 'sealed to him,' meaning if I would be his wife. I told him not as this time."

Mrs. Macy, interrupting with a smile, declared, "Yes. I noticed you didn't refuse definitely."

"Well," answered Miss Keller, in the same bright, instantaneous way that captures her audiences heart and soul, "I thought I had better see his other wives first."

"It is because she is so good looking," explained Mrs. Macy, telling how eager audiences were to know about Miss Keller's matrimonial ideas. "She answers their questions most amusingly and the audiences go wild at her answers."

"Sometimes the little children come to the stage and bring me flowers," continued Miss Keller. "They are so dear to me and I am glad they like me. And ever so many people come up after the talk to shake hands. It is glorious to think they are such friends of mine."

Missing Hazel Gale Found.

Hazel P. Gale, the sixteen-year-old Plaistow, N. H., girl missing from that town since last Friday, has been found. Perley A. Gale, the girl's father, was at police headquarters and told of finding her. He would not give any details.

DIVORCE SUIT OF PRINCESS STIRS SOCIETY FOLKS

Princess Engalitscheff and (below) the Prince, whom she is suing for absolute divorce, charging him with numerous love affairs. The Prince claims blood relationship to the Czar.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Society was startled at the announcement that Princess Evelyn Engalitscheff, formerly of Chicago, had filed papers in a divorce suit against Prince Engalitscheff, who claims blood relationship to the Czar.

She charges that the Prince has had many love affairs. The only person mentioned in the suit is Jane Hathaway. On five other counts the list of places where evidence is alleged to have been obtained against the Prince, reads like a roster of New York's most prominent hotels.

The Princess asks only for the restoration of her maiden name, Evelyn Partridge, and the custody of her thirteen-year-old son, Nicholas Engalitscheff, Jr.

Prince and Princess Engalitscheff are known in the most exclusive circles of the country. He was a dashing young diplomat connected with the Russian consulate at Chicago when they met and married in October, 1898.

For the Thin and Bloodless!

The thin and bloodless, with pale cheeks, white lips and frail angular physique, of this community have been much interested in the reports of physicians and others concerning the effectiveness of the treatment for increasing the red and white corpuscles of the blood, thus adding color and weight with its accompanying vigor to the depleted system. A gain of from 10 to 30 pounds is not at all unusual where the treatment is regularly used for several months, while the color improves almost from the beginning. Most good apothecaries supply it in the form of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, put up in sealed packets with directions for home use. Its action aids assimilation and absorption of the food eaten very promptly.—Advertisement.

WOMEN START WAR ON TANGO

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The movement against illegally conducted dance halls gained momentum in a meeting of the committee of amusement resources at the home of Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, chairman, at which two women prominent in society and philanthropic work, as well as a number of well known men declared themselves ready to help in the work of elevating the moral tone of the dance palaces.

These included Mrs. Everit Macy, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, daughter of Marcellus Hartley; Assistant District Attorney William Dean Embree, Frederick H. Whiting and W. Frank Parsons. These will co-operate with Mrs. Markowitz, Miss Lella Newcomb, Miss Carlotta Nicoll, Mrs. Maurice Wertheim, Mrs. Joel E. Spingarn, Mrs. Edgerton Winthrop, Jr., and others.

"The war is on," said Mrs. Moskowitz. "By the end of the week we shall present evidence against a number of places to License Commissioner Bell. This evidence will be along two lines:

First, that certain dance places are the habitual resort of disorderly persons.

"Second, that a number of specifically named dancing academies have violated the law by selling liquor.

"It should be made plain that this is not a war on dancing. We are fighting the tango, only when it has been commercialized so that the trotteries have become substitutes for disorderly houses."

Thaxter—Traiser.

Miss Marion Jeanette Traiser, daughter of Charles H. Traiser of Clinton, was married to Joseph Hinks Thaxter, Jr., of Hingham, by the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham at the home of the bride's parents in Clinton.

Fabian—Burford.

Miss Miriam Leland Burford of Dorchester was married to Harold Lapham Fabian at the Church of the New Jerusalem, Bowdoin street. The Rev. James Reed, who officiated at the marriage of the grandmother of the bride, performed the ceremony.

WOMAN CALLED IN WHITNEY'S OFFICE

Theodore D. Whitney, whose $230,000 will is being contested by his widow, Mrs. Annie I. Whitney, before Judge Fox and a jury in the Superior Court, showed Mrs. Mary Fanning of No. 111 Dudley street, Roxbury, "autographs of presidents."

Mrs. Fanning was employed as a buyer by Whitney. Her maiden name was Mary Doherty. She was called as a witness by Attorney George L. Mayberry, counsel for Phineas Hubbard, executor of the will. She said she first went to work for Whitney as saleswoman.

SAW EMERALD PIN.

Asked by former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, counsel for Mrs. Whitney, if she ever visited Whitney's private office, she said she did, on matters connected with his business.

Q.—Would he detain you there? A.—Yes, ten or fifteen minutes, perhaps, to show me autographs of presidents and other things.

Q.—Did Mr. Whitney tell you what he was gathering these autographs and writings for? A.—No.

Mrs. Fanning testified she knew Whitney went to Hampton, N. H., that she knew Mrs. Amy H. Barker and saw her at many times; that she saw Annie Mahoney, Miss Woods and Phineas Hubbard in Whitney's private office the day after the latter died, and that she also saw Whitney when he wore the emerald pin in his tie.

Charles F. Whitehead of Allston testified he was in Whitney's employ thirty-five years, going there "as a boy of thirteen;" that he saw Whitney three days before Christmas, 1899, under the influence of liquor; that he used to bring a letter to Mrs. Whitney when she lived at the St. James Hotel, South End.

Questioned about a servant girl named Annie Hall in Mrs. Whitney's employ to whom he gave a note, according to Attorney O'Connell, Whitehead said he remembered no such letter.

Attorney O'Connell could not refresh Whitehead's memory by reading a passage from the letter. The letter was addressed to Mrs. Whitney in Whitney's hand writing and read:

"Don't trust the Irish girl."

DRANK FOR TWO DAYS.

Whitehead said he remembered dressing windows in the old days, but had no knowledge of the drinking which took place on such occasions in which Whitney figured. He did remember, though, of Whitney drinking. He would not say it was a "spree," because some sprees last two or three months and Whitney only showed signs of having drank liquor two days.

Whitehead was scheduled to resume his testimony today. Attorney Mayberry has three other witnesses and expects to complete his side of the case before noon recess. Attorney O'Connell will then open his side of the controversy over the will by having a number of witnesses sworn.

Van Alstine—Dutton.

Miss Doris Dutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwards Dutton of Melrose Highlands, was married to Linwood S. Van Alstine in her parents' home on Franklin street by the Rev. Edward A. Towle of Hillsboro, N. H.

REPORT U. S. NAVAL OFFICER FIRED ON BY THE MEXICANS

soldiers were encountered who threatened Green with execution when he demanded an investigation. Only the efforts of the consul prevented the Mexicans from carrying out their threats."

Captain Kane confirmed the killing of J. N. Bennett, announced Friday by the State Department.

The circumstances under which six of the men had been killed, he said, were personally known to him. Four had been shot from a river bank while in boats and two were shot in a pumping plant. John Smith, engineer for the East Coast Oil Company, was assassinated in a roadside last Saturday. American workmen were absolutely without protection.

A general uprising and massacre of Americans in and near the Panuco Oil fields, Captain Kane said, seemed to be impending.

"If conditions are not changed down there soon," he added, "I believe all Americans will be killed or driven out of the district. There seems to be a general feeling there against all United States citizens. One side is no more hostile than another.

"Smith, the engineer, is the only man whose name I know of those who have been killed recently. He was shot from ambush while he was going down the river from the oil fields to Tampico. Others were killed in the same manner at various times and at different points along the river.

"I understand the American consul at Tampico has all the facts and that full details have been sent by him to the authorities at Washington. I am ready also to give all the information I have to the government."

The oil fields are located about twenty miles up the river from Tampico. They are under control of the Villistas. Tampico is controlled by the Carranzistas.

MEXICAN FACTIONAL LEADERS OPPOSE ANY U. S. INTERFERENCE

WASHINGTON, June 3—Dispatches from various points indicate that Mexican factional leaders will oppose President Wilson's plan for the pacification of Mexico.

Victoriano Huerta, former Provisional President of Mexico, issued a statement from New York, saying: "Any foreign country that is sincere and honest in its endeavor to help our nation would commit the biggest blunder by giving its moral support or assistance to any persons or factions.

"Such actions, instead of bringing the results desired, would result in the opposite direction. The Mexican nation, as a whole, will never accept any such party, even if it would only be suspected that that party received any help from a foreign country.

"Our people will never stand for any government inspired by foreigners, no matter how humanitarian or noble the motives of such foreign nations appear to be."

Heriberto Barron, founder of the Mexican Democratic party, on a mission for General Carranza at New Orleans, said he considered the issuance of the statement "very unfortunate."

Mr. Barron declared it would complicate the Mexican situation by encouraging "reactionaries and conspirators," and that it might delay restoration of peace.

Jesus Acuna, Governor of Coahuila, en route to Vera Cruz, said:

"I regret that President Wilson should have felt it necessary to interfere in the internal affairs of Mexico at a time when the Constitutionalist forces are on the eve of reoccupying Mexico City and establishing there a government which will merit the recognition of the United States and other governments."

Francisco McManus, Villa consul at El Paso, Tex., made the following statement: "Except to state emphatically that I do not, in any way, recognize the right of the United States to interfere in the domestic affairs of Mexico, I have no statement at this time to make regarding the Wilson note.

"I can add, however, that foreigners and Mexicans alike, who have gone about their legitimate pursuits in territory controlled by General Villa, have received protection."

AWAIT MEXICAN NEWS.

Meanwhile official Washington waited with great eagerness for reports from Mexico as to the manner in which the President's warning to "get together" was received by the several leaders.

European diplomatists and those in South American circles indicated their approval of the plan. The next question that is being asked in Washington is:

"What means will the President adopt to enforce his warning?"

His statement was interpreted generally in official and diplomatic quarters as meaning that the United States if it fail to bring all elements in Mexico into agreement would give support to those which did agree. Actual intervention by this government was considered likely only if anarchy should follow a failure to procure a remedy for the present situation from within the republic.

The first thought of the President, it was stated, is to restore constitutional government to Mexico, and it was believed he would urge acceptance of some member of the cabinet of Madero, the murdered president, as provisional ruler, to set up a cabinet and start the machinery for the establishment of a legal government.

General Venustiano Carranza sent to his Washington agent a cablegram in which he claims that General Jacinto Trevino has won an "overwhelming victory" over the Villistas west of Ebano, where he captured the Villistas' headquarters at Auza.

The State Department received a cablegram from its agents at Vera Cruz confirming this announcement and stating that the constitutionalist authorities there had announced another victory over the Villa forces at Ebano, which is immediately west of Tampico.

Not more than two or three pounds of corn, beans or flour will be distributed from the Red Cross famine relief stores in Monterey to one family at one time, Consul-General Hanna today reported to State Department. He said that a carload of corn and a carload of beans from the American Red Cross had arrived and distribution had commenced. A carload of flour consigned to Hanna from the Chamber of Commerce was to be sold in amounts of not over two pounds to any one family.

After the California Expositions take a Little Sea Trip

Here's the idea! Go out to California by way of Denver, Colorado Springs, Pikes Peak, the Wonderful Royal Gorge and Salt Lake City—all this by daylight and without extra charge, provided you travel on the Burlington Route (C. B. & Q. R. R.), which has through service from Chicago and St. Louis.

After that, "do" California and the Expositions and then take one of those magnificent new Great Northern Pacific Steamships—the finest on the Pacific—from San Francisco up to Portland, Oregon. Then, homeward bound, stop at either Glacier National Park or Yellowstone Park—the wonders of the world.

Now will you allow me to help you plan for such a trip? That's what I'm here for.

You are planning to spend a sum that entitles you to see the best scenery in the West. Give me an idea of when you want to go, how long you can stay, etc., and I will plan a trip especially fitted to your time and needs—also send you without charge such pictures, maps and printed descriptive matter as will aid you in determining the best thing to do. To Improve Expression As Well As Complexion

No face is really beautiful that lacks expression. Do you realize that continual use of powders and creams tends to spoil beauty of [illegible] and elasticity of expression? Why not quit cosmetics, use something better, which won't clog the pores or make the skin dry, pasty or oily? Ordinary mercolized wax acts quite differently from any cosmetic. It wonderfully improves any complexion, giving it life and expression. By gradually, harmlessly peeling off the thin veil of surface skin, it brings to view a fresh, soft, spotless complexion, delicately beautiful and youthful. Every druggist has this wax; it is seldom more than an ounce is needed. It is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. In a week or two the transformation is complete.

Wrinkles do not of course enhance the expression. Neither do the tasty things many use to eradicate them. A treatment free from all objection is made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel; use as a wash lotion. This [illegible] removes even the most obstinate wrinkles. —Advertisement.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.—Advertisement

Man Is Accused of Robbing Clergyman

Richard Christy, forty-one, was arrested by Detective Sergeant Anderson of the Lagrange street station, charged with stealing $170 from the Rev. John Paris, an Assyrian clergyman, who is collecting funds in this country.

According to the police, the clergyman was stopping at the Hotel Blenheim, where, it is claimed, the prisoner was employed on May 27. In a belt which the clergyman wore, he carried two fifty dollar bills in United States currency and $70 in Turkish money. He left the belt in his room, during a short absence. When he returned, the money was missing.

Red Cross After Cash to Check Mexican Famine

Miss Louisa P. Loring, Red Cross emergency secretary for Massachusetts, has received from Washington a telegram that says a great number of unfortunate Mexicans, largely women and children, face death by starvation. Miss Loring makes an appeal for funds that the sufferers may not die of starvation.

The American Red Cross reports that it has a carload of corn and one of beans on the way from Laredo, Texas, to Consul-General Hanna at Monterey. Free freight and free duties have been arranged, and the military authorities guarantee safe conduct.

The Red Cross declares that it cannot continue to send assistance to the Mexicans without public contributions. It says that in scores of Mexican towns the people are in a deplorable condition of need.

"Here we have in our western hemisphere, people face to face with absolute starvation," declared Miss Loring. "The Red Cross will place its own agent in Mexico, and through the State Department in co-operation with the United States consuls there, such supplies as may be purchased with the contributions or given in kind will be distributed among the suffering non-combatants."

More Mail Clerks for Summer Rush

Sixty of the 100 substitute railway mail clerks to be appointed for the Summer vacation season have been put to work by Supt. Frank D. Johnston of the mail service in the New England division. He said that by June 25 everything will be in readiness, so far as the railway mail service is concerned, for handling the Summer vacation mail.

Supt. Johnston said it is hoped to bring mail from New York to Boston an hour earlier than under the present schedule by sending it by way of the Shore Line. He declared there was no truth in the report that the Springfield line was to be done away with.

REAL ESTATE MEN HAVE AN OUTING

Members and guests of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Board journeyed to Phillips Beach for a field day at the Tedesco Country Club. The afternoon was given over to tennis, golf and baseball. General Francis Peabody presided at dinner. There were informal speeches, a minstrel show and musical entertainment.

The younger men took to tennis and golf; their elders departed for the diamond. The baseball enthusiasts were divided into the State Streets and the Devonshires, the former captained by L. W. Parent and the latter by Frederick H. Viaux. Horace G. Allen, umpire, announced that Mr. Viaux, entered in the sixty-year-old class, would be allowed four strikes.

But Mr. Viaux, though his team went to a 33-19 defeat, showed the youngers some tricks. His fielding, batting and base-sliding were surprising. The winning battery was composed of Frank H. Purrington, pitcher, and Louis W. Parent, catcher. Their rivals were F. O. Woodruff, pitcher, and William P. O'Brien, catcher.

Joseph Seabury and A. Dudley Dowd received silver cups for defeating George A. Dill and Frank E. Fennessey in the tennis finals.

Both men are alleged to have records as sneak thieves and both admitted that their pictures were in the Rogues' Gallery. They went into an office in the Kimball Building and told the stenographer that they had an appointment with a man. The girl knew that this man had been dead for two years and notified the police. Nothing was missing from the building.

DISCUSS SUNDAY IN THE CRIMSON

Harvard students are today discussing an editorial in the Crimson on the coming, next year, of the Rev. "Billy" Sunday.

While intimating that the great evangelist may not find things at Harvard just to his taste, the editorial urges all Harvard men to at least give the evangelist a fair hearing. It points out that his Princeton visit was a big success and hints that some good results may follow his appearance in Cambridge.

After alluding to the policy of absolute religious freedom established at the college several years ago, the editorial states that "Billy Sunday's coming may put this spirit of toleration to a test. After observing that the evangelist is likely to criticise certain things he sees and hears about the college, the editorial adds:

"Mr. Sunday should be given a fair hearing; he may have many valuable suggestions. His recent visit to Princeton was distinctly a success. He deserves at least unprejudiced consideration, whether or not his ideas meet with general approval."

Music to Soothe Savage Harvard Men at Exams

The charms of music, famed in poetry and song, will receive an official semi-scientific test at Harvard today, when the daily sessions of examination periods are ushered in with organ recitals to calm the troubled nerves of students who have been making up for lapses during the year by the forcing process of "cramming" for the final examinations.

The result of the test, instituted by Archibald T. Davidson, Harvard's choirmaster, will be awaited by the nervous students with more eagerness than by the faculty even.

SCORE 'SPEED' ON RAILROAD BILLS

Striking indictments against the "speed" program of the present Legislature and its effect upon railroad legislation were presented to the Railroad Committee by Attorney-General Attwill and Chairman Edward F. McSweeney of the Boston Port Directors.

Chairman McSweeney declared at the public hearing that in February he requested the Railroad Committee for an opportunity to be heard on the effect the Boston & Maine reorganization bill and the New Haven validation bill would have but that the request had not been granted.

Attorney-General Attwill said that he called the same matter to the attention of the Republican leaders of the Legislature before the bills were passed by the House, but that no attention had been paid to the matter by them.

CHARGES ON SWITCHING.

They recommended that the New Haven road, in return for the State granting the road the right to validate its unlawful securities, be required to transport freight between the railroad yards and the Commonwealth Pier without compelling the shippers to pay the switching charges.

Vice-President Buckland of the New Haven said the road intends to absorb the switching charges, but he protested against any provision of legislation which would require the New Haven to absorb the Boston & Maine charges.

During the public hearing, which was devoted to the drafts of New Haven bills submitted by the Public Service Commission, and to which the Governor stands committed, Chairman Frederick J. Macleod and Joseph B. Eastman, of the commission, declared that Governor Walsh was absolutely right in seeking to give the commission absolute authority over the finances of the New Haven road.

COMPLETE INVESTIGATION.

Both Messrs. Macleod and Eastman insisted that the people of the State should not be obliged to pay for carfares based on fictitious or unearned values of the New Haven road. They also declared that they agreed with the Governor that the commission should have complete authority to investigate the finances of the New Haven with the view of recommending that the railroad be obliged to divest itself of its illegal holdings.

Meanwhile the Legislature continues to jockey with the Governor's vigorous vetoes of the two New Haven bills, which he declared to be incompatible with the interests of the people. The Senate has delayed action on the vetoes with the apparent purpose of finally passing some legislation that will be beneficial to the New Haven.

Fight Stubborn Fire on S. S. City of Delhi

A lively fire was discovered in part of a cargo of jute and rubber in the forward hold of the steamship City of Delhi at Pier 46, Mystic Wharf, Charlestown, by Watchman John McGowan. The firemen worked for three hours and succeeded in extinguishing the fire by pouring large quantities of water into the hold. Their task was accomplished only by hard work and the men were obliged to work in relays because of the fumes of the burning jute and rubber.

BOY KILLED BY GOLF CLUB BLOW

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 3.—John Chmiel, seventeen, is dead and Stirling Wheeler, eleven, is heartbroken as a result of a tragedy at the Amoskeag golf links when Chmiel was struck in the eye with the heavy metal end of a golf club.

The boy was taken to a hospital, where his eye was removed, but despite all efforts to save his life he died.

Chmiel was watching a golf match between several older boys and in the excitement came up behind Wheeler, just as the older boy swung his driver for a shot. The stick hit Chmiel with full force in the eye. No action has been taken, as the authorities are satisfied that the accident was unavoidable.

Tent No Place for President, Wilson Finds

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Tent life in Washington is a complete failure. If you don't believe it ask President Wilson.

The President went out to the official tent to be alone with the problems of state. Two hours after he entered the tent a sudden squall came up and the wind blew the presidential papers all over the greensward.

The wind was from the Potomac River. On its wings it brought the real thing in mosquito. What the mosquito family did to the presidential epidermis would not be a nice thing for a patriot who does not know how to exterminate mosquitoes to record.

The President was dictating a paper of state to his private stenographer, Charles Swem. Just a short distance away is the White House tennis court. The President watched the wonderful antics of the players and listened to their joyous repartee for half an hour and then said:

"Come on, Charlie, this is no place to work."

QUICK DROP BY THE MERCURY

Yesterday was the coldest June 2 since 1897, when it rained hard and the temperature was one degree lower. Tuesday at 11 a. m. the temperature was 75; yesterday at the same hour the mercury had dropped 28 points and at 7 last evening the thermometer stood at 46.

"THE GODDESS" By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

THE GODDESS—the serial Beautiful—written by two famous authors and presented by the Hearst newspapers in collaboration with the renowned Vitagraph Players:

Miss Anita Stewart as the Goddess.

Mr. Earle Williams as Tommy Barclay.

Be sure to read each instalment carefully, and then see the characters and the thrilling incidents spring to life in the motion pictures.

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

[illegible]

TEN minutes later the arrest was made and Freddie's reputation was established.

Sometimes he was sent upon definite missions, and carried them through to perfection.

Flannerman's barroom was Freddie's headquarters. Sometimes the habitues amused themselves by getting him drunk, but not often, for they were poor men, and even a mild jag costs money. One day the proprietor tapped Freddie on the shoulder and told him that he was wanted on the phone.

"Yes, this is Freddie, all right."

"This is Mrs. Baxter."

"Hope you're well, Mrs. Baxter."

"Same to you, Freddie. I bin trying to find Sweetzer all over town. Can you find him?"

"Sure; what'll I tell him?"

"You say to him that Mrs. Baxter says to say she's got a pippin for him."

"Mrs. Baxter says to say she's SLIPPIN' TOWARD HIM?"

"Pippin for him—p-i-double p."

"P-i-double pip"——

"P-i-p-p-i-n—pippin."

"Pippin for him."

"You're on, Freddie. You tell him to come right round."

"What for?"

"Why, for the pippin."

"I mean what for would I tell him?"

"Why, for about a dollar, Freddie, if you will bring him around quick."

As Freddie the Ferrett left Flannerman's it was his luck to run into Sweetzer, who was on the point of entering.

Sweetzer had the appearance of a ward politician. His hat was high and shiny, his smile was friendly and his eye was shrewd and mean.

"Bin hunting you all over town," said Freddie.

"What for?"

"Mrs. Baxter says to say she's got a pippin for you."

"Not so loud. Where is she?"

"Mrs. Baxter?"

"No, the other."

"I'm to take you 'round."

They set off at once in the direction of Mrs. Baxter's "Market," as it was called by the insiders, Freddie shuffling and skipping at Sweetzer's side, prattling and whistling by turns.

Although she had as yet done nothing that was not helpful or kind, there was something about Mrs. Baxter that rang false, and the house in which she lived was a strange place. It was a stuffy, padded sort of house. Every door had its pair of heavy curtains, every chair was upholstered; every picture had a scarf or a sash of ribbon thrown across one corner of it. The house was lighted by electricity, but the lights were not bright.

Mrs. Baxter's sitting room and office was at the back of the house, up one flight of stairs. And here, summoned downstairs by a neat looking colored maid, she left Celestia to herself for awhile.

Sweetzer and Freddie were in the front parlor. Mrs. Baxter swept in upon them with an important air of mystery.

"Got the real thing this time, have you?" asked Sweetzer.

"You just bet I have," said Mrs. Baxter. "When you've seen her all I'll have to do will be to name the sum. Just step upstairs, Billy, and you, too, Freddie, if you'd like to have a peep at the real thing."

"Usual place?" asked Sweetzer.

"Yep. But go quiet. She's got ears like a lynx and she can see plum through paint and canvas."

The men followed Mrs. Baxter on tiptoe. But she made plenty of noise, stepping heavily and singing as she went, thus disguising whatever sounds might have been inadvertently made by the men.

Just before the came to the door of Mrs. Baxter's office Sweetzer and Freddie ducked off into what appeared to be a dark closet, and pulled the door to after them, while Mrs. Baxter, with a great bustling, noisy cheerfulness, rejoined Celestia.

"You're looking at my pictures, aren't you, dear?" she said. "I love beauty, I love nature. Now that girl with her hands to her hair, ain't she just too cute and graceful for anything?"

Mrs. Baxter's taste in pictures ran to Roman ladies (who had never been nearer Rome than a Broadway photographer) with plenty of bare arms and shoulders and somewhat skimpy togas. Some of them were really attractive looking and had posed gracefully. One had her hands to her hair.

Another looked cheerfully across her snowy shoulder. A third balanced a classic jug upon a saucy, bowery head. A fourth had caught her draperies with one hand just in the nick of time. Some were in dancing attitudes. One danced madly in a grove of trees and had bunches of grapes in her hands and her hair.

In moving from one picture to another Celestia unconsciously assumed many lovely attitudes herself. Once she lifted her hands to her hair; several times she smiled back at girls who appeared to be smiling at her. And at last she stood with her hands loosely caught behind her and looked up at the masterpiece of Mrs. Baxter's collection.

This was no photograph. But a genuine oil painting. And this doesn't mean an insult to it.

As art it wasn't bad at all. Some young fellow with a genuine talent had made it. If he had also succeeded in making a name for himself the picture would have been worth a good deal of money; but, as Mrs. Baxter explained, "poor Allison had drank and doped himself to death. And I took this over," she said, "in lieu of money that he owed me. It's called 'The Peacock Girl.'"

Watch for the next installment tomorrow.

Sweetzer, the underworld grafter, hears from "Freddie the Ferret" that Mrs. Baxter has a beautiful girl as a prisoner

Make a Study of Yourself

Hold Up the Mirror of Honesty to Your Eyes

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HAVE you ever held up before your character the mirror of honesty? Suppose you try it now. [illegible] poet gave wiser advice than that contained in: "Know, then, thyself—presume not God to scan. The proper study of mankind is man."

What you know of yourself ought to give you vast toleration for others. It ought to make it possible for you to measure life with sanity and to help you to work out your own relation to it.

It is very easy to build up a little ideal of what you would like to be, or to dream dreams of what you are going to do and to imagine that in planning you have creditably accomplished. It is easy to explain all your needs on the grounds of higher motives than you ever had.

Pettiness may masquerade as sensitiveness, bitterness as honesty, malice as high-minded desire to save people from disillusionment. Don't hedge—don't quibble. Look yourself squarely and honestly in the face. Perhaps it will hurt when you see a bit of shifty dishonesty, a tendency to lie weakly out of scrapes, a narrow-minded attitude toward your neighbors and a jealous passion of rage for the love you want and don't get.

There is no luck in the world except that which comes from making friends with circumstances. There is no fortune except that of high desert. Take stock of your abilities and deservings. They are your assets. If you know your material you can work it to advantage in any field of endeavor. Well, then, learn the human material that is yourself, and so make the honest, strongest MOST of it.

Respectable Origin

The Prince of Wales is as fond of a joke now as he was when he was a little boy.

The late King Edward used to tell the following story. The King asked the little Prince what part of history he was then studying.

"All about Perkin Warbeck," replied his Royal Highness.

"And who is he?" inquired His Majesty, anxious to test his grandson's knowledge.

"Oh," answered the Prince, "he pretended he was the son of a king, but he wasn't. He was the son of respectable parents."

Beauty and the Beast

Another Sparkling "Right-O" Story, This Time Dealing with Pulchritude

By DOROTHY DIX

"I SEE," said the Stenographer, "that the artistic sense of my sex has at last asserted itself. Heretofore men have been the real Beauty Lovers, and have refused to pay any attention to a girl unless she was long on pulchritude, whereas women were tickled to death to receive attentions from a man, no matter what sort of a looker he was.

"Also the loss of her complexion and figure has been held to be sufficient to justify a man in sidestepping his wife, while a woman was expected to be faithful to her husband even if he did get to be bald headed and weigh a ton. But all that's going to be changed, for the artistic side of women's natures has been cultivated and they are going in for beauty, too. In proof whereof is the case reported from California by the newspapers, in which a girl broke off her engagement because her sweetheart fattened up."

"With the matrimonial market in the depressed condition it is now, it's no time to look a gift fiance in the belt," replied the Bookkeeper, warningly; "a girl is lucky to get a husband in these days, no matter whether he is built on the Early Gothic or the bay-window style of architecture."

"That's the way women used to look at the matter," agreed the Stenographer, "they've been more liberal about the living picture business than men have. If a man was agreeable and intelligent we haven't turned him down on his personal appearance, as men do a woman.

"Just think. If a fat, puffy, red-faced woman with no eyebrows and a bald spot the size of a soup plate on top of her head should go to a ball, she would paper the wall for a thousand years before any man ever asked her to dance, and if any hostess forced a gentleman to engage in a conversation with her, he would do it with an air of an early Christian martyr.

"But you can see women every day gurgling with delight over the companionship of such a looking man. The lack of hair doesn't bar a man from society, but the reputaton of having a bald spot would be a bigger handicap for a woman than the worst aspersions on her character. If a man has gray matter inside of his skull, what he has on the outside doesn't count. But if a woman lacks the looks, she might have all the virtues of the beatitudes and no man would ever get near enough to her to find it out."

"An ugly woman sure doe make me cross-eyed," said the Bookkeeper. "None of your dames with the fixed face for mine!"

"You're in the chorus strong," returned the Stenographer, "and that's what makes being a woman the hardest job that any human being ever tackled. No matter what a woman does she's got to add the beauty frill to it. If a man wants to hire a mal stenographer or bookkeeper all he asks is that he knows how to do the work. He may be ugly enough to stop the clock and it doesn't cut any ice with his job, but a woman has got to be a good-looker as well as a good worker.

"And that isn't all. Even the women who do the big things have to carry a side line of beauty. When a woman writes a big book or makes a big scientific discovery the newspaper accounts always say that she's very handsome and an elegant dresser.

"Isn't that enough to jar you? What difference does her looks make? Who cares whether Edison looks like a matinee hero or a farmer, or whether Mr. Taft has got a straight-front figure or not? But if they were women we would expect them to have peachy complexions and peroxided locks in addition to making inventions and being ex-Presidents."

"Men don't have to do the living-picture act," asserted the Bookkeeper, comfortably.

"And that's where they're in luck," replied the Stenographer. "Talk about getting the right to vote, the greatest right that women could get would be the right to look as ugly as God made them."

"If women take to passing up good chances of marriage because the man isn't a parlor ornament, they are going to lose out," said the Bookkeeper.

"Right-o," exclaimed the Stenographer. "The supply of hen's teeth and beautiful men is about on a par. Furthermore, a husband who is a star performer in the good looks class is about the worst hoodoo that any woman can acquire. She's in for a life-time of hearing people wonder why such a handsome man ever happened to tie up with such a homely woman. More, she can never let up on handing him hot air, for the minute she quits fanning him with flattery, some other woman will begin."

"When you marry——" began the Bookkeeper.

"When I marry," interrupted the Stenographer, "my husband will be the prize winner in an Ugly Man's Club. Then I won't have to stand for any invidious comparisons."

In Our Wonderful World

ALTHOUGH the sea may seem spacious enough to hold almost any number of fish, this is by no means the case.

The roe of a fair-sized cod contains about [illegible] eggs, but in the ordinary course of events only a very small portion of these are ever hatched, for the roe is considered a great delicacy by hundreds of fish, and even the father cod himself has been known to devour it.

If all these eggs were hatched, however, and the cod from them, reaching maturity, bred one, the fish would fill the English channel.

Sparrows also multiply with great rapidity. In 1862 a homesick English settler, missing their cheery chirping, had a couple sent over to him and set them free.

The birds increased at an astonishing rate and soon came in huge flocks to pillage the wheatfields.

Even the apparently harmless white butterfly would become as great a pest as the locust in warmer countries, were it not [illegible] a number of its young are killed in their early stages.

At the end of three years its descendants, if they all lived, would amount to the almost incredible number of 100,000,000.

Thus it is apparent that, were it not for the endless warfare which goes on among the lower creatures, they would become a menace against mankind not to be lightly reckoned with.

Genuine attar of roses from the Orient. When pure it is of almost fabulous value. The secret of its preparation is carefully guarded and the finest product is usually sold in quantities not exceding a few drops. Violet is one of the perfumes that have been so closely imitated that thoughtless people ever stop to discriminate and buy the manufactured for the genuine article. The recent discovery of a chemical process by which a perfume can be produced which cannot, even by experts, be distinguished from true violet extract, is a matter of importance. The substance, however, is worth $100 per ounce wholesale.

An important discovery, it is claimed, has recently been made in the use of cocoanut water as a rubber coagulant, which, should it prove successful, would prove a boon to the Ceylon rubber industry in particular. There, it is said, millions of gallons of cocoanut water which now run to waste on estates in copra-drying and desiccation mills can be utilized as a profitable by-product, besides producing a superior coagulant in making rubber.

It is understood that the cocoanut water is allowed to ferment for four or five days, after which it can be used immediately for coagulating latex. One or two ounces of the fermented liquid will coagulate one pint of pure latex. It is said to produce a better rubber than that procured from the present method of using crude acetic acid, especially so far as color goes and clearer than that obtained from the cocoa-fermentation acid treatment.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

"I HAVE arranged everything," she went on in that solemn, toneless voice. "Already I feel like some one who has died—I have no feeling, no sense. Somehow or other I do not care what happens. All I know is that I cannot live, and perhaps it is just as well for you. You are cruel and heartless, like all men; but I know you well enough to know that you could never have any real peace of mind while you knew that I was alive. No, No; don't attempt to interrupt me," she added, with some slight show of feeling, as he made an effort to stop her, to speak. "I have been a sorry fool, Noel, and I ought to have discovered it long ago. I was blind.

"I don't know—I can't think, I am so weary of it all—but somehow I could not bring myself to believe that you could change so soon and so completely. But I ought to have known that you could not, by the natural order of things, have been expected to be different from all men. You grew tired of me—[illegible]

"Is there a more utterly pitiable object than the worn-out plaything of a man? That is what I am; don't attempt to deny it. I can see so clearly now, and I am so tired—so very tired!" She caught her breath and a little quivering sob escaped her.

The man held out his hands protestingly, then covered his face and groaned aloud. The woman's words and manner were playing havoc with his nerves. His reason told him that she was talking hysteric nonsense and that she was grossly unfair to him.

His reason gave him a good and sufficient defence, urged him to a strong and logical protest. But for the moment she had succeeded in almost making him believe that he was the vile thing of her imagination, a brutal and heartless man, a man who was not loyal to woman.

"What do you want me to do?" he burst out passionately. "What can I do? Is it fair to talk like this? Is it fair? Tell me what you expect of me?"

She shook her head sadly.

"I do not want you to do anything, Noel," she said sadly. "There is nothing you can do. I expect nothing of you. I am past all that—long past it, Noel. And as for what is fair—is there anything fair in the world?"

"You shall not talk like that!" he cried passionately. "You are mad! You cannot know what you are saying. Woman alive, you cannot be so blind as to think that, even if—if——"

He was going to say that even if he loved her, even if she was all his life, that she was the wife of another man and therefore sacred to him, and that to think of her as anything else than the wife of her husband was a dishonor and a crime. But the look she gave him froze the unspoken words on his dry, white lips. He was silent. He had nothing to say.

SHE CALLS EVA A HOLLOW-SOULED GIRL

She shook her head again.

"I am not mad, Noel," she said. "The veil has dropped from my eyes and I see everything quite plainly. Oh, I have been through many hells since—since the day when I first heard the truth from your lips—many phases. What does it matter? It is all over and done with—done with forever.

"There was a time, though I do not think I ever let you know it, when I was consumed with hatred for you, hatred bred of my great love, when I had only thoughts of revenge in my heart; when—yes, when, but for a small thing, I might have blindly wrecked my life and perhaps Godfrey's, and—the girl's, though I do not consider her much.

"She is only a silly, golden-haired, hollow-souled child, who will fall in love a dozen times in her life, even if she is your—your wife.

A Harmless Way to Remove Coarse Hair

"This method is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. It robs hair of its vitality by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin. Theatre Magazine says: De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover, is "far superior to electricity, X-ray or any other method." Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from so-called magazines which do not exist.—Advertisement.

BOTH MOTHER AND DAUGHTER HAPPY

Mrs. L. B. Clark of 39 Lynde St. Relates How She and Her Mother Were Benefited.

The Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic is being introduced, has presented a scene of unusual activity for the past few days. Many people are calling out of gratitude to thank the Plant Juice man for what his remedy has done for them. The following statement was made by Mrs. L. B. Clark, who resides at No. 39 Lynde Street, who is a prominent church member, and is a well-known lady, having lived in Boston for 40 years. She stated:

"I had dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach trouble for years; after eating I would bloat and belch gas, and felt a hard lump in the pit of my stomach. I suffered considerable pain, also had pains in my back and shoulders, palpitation of the heart, fluttering, etc. I had that tired-out feeling all of the time. I had doctored for my ailments, but did not seem to get any relief. I finally tried Plant Juice, and can now truthfully say that I feel like a new woman. My mother, who is 88 years of age, has also taken Plant Juice, her ailments being about the same as mine, and it has helped her. We have both taken the remedy for two weeks, and we are both feeling fine, and are recommending Plant Juice to all of our friends."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett's Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Advertisement.

STOLEN BRIDE RESCUED HERE AND REUNITED WITH HUSBAND

Mrs. Richard E. Percival, a nineteen-year-old Providence bride, was reunited with her frantic husband at the Hotel Thorndike at 7 o'clock today after being kidnaped by twelve audacious jokers fifteen minutes after the wedding last night, rushed to Boston in a high-powered automobile and left at the hotel for her bridegroom to trace as best he might. A few minutes after the bride was found the couple started back to Providence for the belated honeymoon.

The police of both Boston and Providence were on the bridal trail through the night. The Boston police, after three hours' canvass of the leading hotels, finally found the bride at the Thorndike at 5 o'clock in the morning. Abandoned by the kidnapers, she had promptly telephoned to Providence, so that her husband received word where she was. When the police came she was waiting for her husband to come to her.

The bridegroom and his pursuit party rushed in at 7 o'clock. The bridegroom was wrathful at the way his bride had been snatched from him. But he was mighty glad to locate her finally. With him were the bride's mother and brother, Mrs. George Briggs and Raymond L. Briggs of Providence.

The bride was formerly Miss Carra Briggs of No. 45 Anthony avenue, Providence. Her father is a barrel dealer.

SEIZED AFTER WEDDING.

The couple were married by the Rev. H. B. Carpenter of the Cranston Street Baptist Church of Providence. After the ceremony the bride went to her room to change into traveling attire.

As she came down the back stairs at her grandfather's home to enter the kitchen she was seized by one of the "kidnapers." Margaret and Mark Percival, sister and brother of the bridegroom, tried to free the girl but they were unsuccessful.

She was carried to the back yard and then passed over two fences to other members of the party who made their way with their captive to Lexington avenue where two automobiles were waiting.

The party started for Boston. As they left the home red fire was set off by other friends who thought that the bride and bridegroom had eluded the after-wedding ceremonies.

A few minutes later the fact that the bride had been "kidnaped" became known. Two other automobiles were pressed into service to pursue the "kidnapers."

PURSUED IN AUTO.

For over ten miles the bride was followed by her husband, but trace of the "kidnapers" lost after they passed the Massachusetts State line. Then for several hours the husband continued the hunt.

Finally, Raymond Briggs, brother of the bride, called up the police and requested that the party be arrested as abductors. The Boston police were notified and officers were sent to all the hotels in the Back Bay to find the party.

The party reached Boston shortly after 2 o'clock and when the bride complained of being hungry she was taken to a lunch room in Park square.

Employes in the lunch room spent nearly a half hour preparing the wedding breakfast, which consisted of sandwiches, eggs, toast, pie and coffee.

Five minutes after the party left the lunch room the police arrived. The two automobiles which bore Rhode Island registration numbers, were traced down Summer street and to the Hotel Thorndike.

When the police reached the hotel they found that the bride had been left alone in a room and her "kidnapers" had started for Providence.

The bride telephoned her husband. Accompanied by Raymond Briggs he started for Boston in an automobile.

While the search was being conducted in Boston police all over Rhode Island were being instructed to apprehend the party. The bridegroom, after he had abandoned the chase, went to the home of his wife's parents and waited for some word from his wife.

"The whole affair is more serious than the persons who carried her away imagine," said Raymond Briggs. "We will do all we can to have them punished."

"I think that it is terrible," declared Mrs. Percival when seen at the Hotel Thorndike early today.

"I am sure that I don't like it at all. They thought that it would be very smart to keep my husband and me apart. It will be good enough for the whole party if they are arrested and made to pay for their fun.

"The affair has made my mother very ill and I am extremely sorry for her sake. I am sure that her illness and worry over the affair will practically spoil our honeymoon."

Why Suffer From Migraine or Sick Headache?

USE ANTI-KAMNIA TABLETS

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one Anti-kamnia Tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet.

Anti-kamnia may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all pain.

Clogged-Up Liver Causes Headache

It's a foolish proceeding to suffer from constipation, sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, indigestion and kindred ailments when CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will end all misery in a few hours. Purely vegetable. Act gently on liver and bowels.

Six Harvard Seniors Rally to Defend Maxim

Supporters of Hudson Maxim have come to the fore at Harvard and right merrily hand it to the Crimson editors for impugning the motive which led Mr. Maxim to present each member of the senior class with a copy of his latest book, "Defenceless America."

To the unthinkable graduate the "Crime is of use," say six stalwarts, who have written the Crimson editors the following:

"During the agitation which has been going on recently in favor of a better army and navy and for the purpose of widening the scope and field of usefulness of the Summer military camps, it has been amusing to note the stand which the Crimson has taken. The Crimson is no doubt a great factor in shaping the ideas and raising the ideals of the unthinking undergraduate, but it is a question as to whether every undergraduate holds this same view. We feel that each individual has ideas of his own upon the subject, and that, on the whole, they may differ from those which the Crimson has so frequently and so magnanimously expressed.

"It is probably a serious matter for the Crimson to pursue the dove of peace with an open cage and a pinch of salt, but while engaged in this inspired pursuit, it should keep one eye out for the other person's flower beds that might be trampled upon.

"Mr. Hudson Maxim has with great generosity made a gift to the seniors. The seniors do not wish to have the view of this gift expressed by the Crimson's editorial of yesterday accepted as the one voicing their sentiments as a whole, and we, at least, disclaim any attempt of the Crimson to take the obligation from our shoulders, and hereby express our thanks to Mr. Maxim for his gift, and our appreciation of his personal sacrifice."

The communication is signed by J. Garland, H. W. Schroeder, J. W. Ballou, Fred S. Hopkins, Paul Blackmur and B. P. Whitney, all members of the senior class.

WIFE TELLS OF DOCTOR'S KISSES

MORRISTOWN, N. J., June 3.—Testifying in behalf of her husband, George H. Wilder, a wealthy New York stock broker, in his suit against Dr. George Stuart Willis, a local physician, for $50,000 for the alleged alienation of her affections, Mrs. Wilder told of the relations between herself and the physician.

Mrs. Wilder testified that Dr. Willis had been her family physician since 1907. Her relations with the doctor began, she said, on February 15, 1912, when as the doctor was leaving the house after making a call he suddenly seated himself in a chair and, drawing her to his lap, kissed her.

She said she cried because of the insult, and he told her he would not do it again. A few days later, while making another call, however, he grew more familiar.

This, she testified, continued until April 30, Dr. Willis calling at the house two or three times a week.

At the same time, she testified, he poisoned her mind against her husband, whom she always had trusted, by telling her he had outside affairs and was doing "what half of Morristown is now doing."

She began, she said, to be irritated with her husband and to love Dr. Willis. Later she confessed to her husband, who took her hand and said she had broken his heart.

Foss Believes Frank Will Win

"I feel very sure that the decision of the Georgia Prison Commission will be favorable to Leo Frank," said former Governor Foss on his return from Atlanta, where he had been pleading for commutation of the death sentence.

"The plea of the Massachusetts delegation was well received by the Prison Commission and by the people of Georgia, and I am certain our petition made a deep impression upon them."

A dispatch from Atlanta stated that James Conley, negro factory sweeper, who completed his sentence of one year as accessory to the murder of Mary Phagan, denied that he had written the "Anna Maud Carter" letters which figured in Frank's motion for a new trial.

Conley's denial, made in the presence of Solicitor Dorsey, was the first intimation that Conley had not been the author of these letters. Frank's lawyers sought to show that Conley had written, without assistance, the famous "murder notes" found beside Mary Phagan's body. Conley testified at Frank's trial that the notes were written by him at Frank's dictation.

The efforts of the police to apprehend this "wild man" [illegible]. He is believed to be the same person whose exploits have terrorized women and men at various times during the past three years.

The latest episode in the career of the crank has caused considerable excitement among the residents of the town. Women and children fear to venture far beyond their homes.

In former years, the man only jumped out from the woods and frightened persons as they were passing. He is apparently more dangerous this year. Miss Marie, who is a nurse, was approached from behind by the man, who pulled her to the ground and beat her. He held his hand over her mouth to prevent any outcry. He released her only when an automobile approached on the road which skirts the woods. The occupants of the machine took the woman to her home, where she was treated by a doctor.

HOW I DARKENED MY GRAY HAIR

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural color with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they are all delighted with it. To 7 ozs. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp.

CHICAGO WOMAN IS HELD AS SPY

PARIS, June 3.—Mystery surrounds the arrest of Isabelle Wade, thirty-seven, a Chicago singer, at Milan, where she is held today on a spy charge.

When first taken into custody she maintained she was Margherita Martello, and had found a valise she carried, containing valuable Italian military secrets, in the street.

Later she admitted her identity and declared the valise was given her by Martin Schehammer, a Bavarian officer arrested a few days ago on an espionage charge.

Previously the police had information which led them to believe she was his accomplice, although many believe they were merely friends.

It was learned that Schehammer had lived in several Italian towns, Milan and Rome included, and had many addresses. The woman lives in an apartment under the name of Margherita Martello.

Search of her apartment revealed a large package of correspondence in cipher, military maps of important strategic value in the provinces of Alessandria, Udine, Verona and Bassano. These were contained in a large valise in which also were field glasses and a revolver.

From another package of German correspondence it would appear that Isabelle Wade had had dealings with the police of Berlin.

She declared Schehammer had placed the valise in her hands, saying that he was shadowed by the police and feared he would be arrested at any moment and that it was necessary to hide the documents.

SALANDRA TELLS WHY ITALY FIGHTS

By BRINXTON D'ALLAIRE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, June 2.—A powerful defence of Italy's entrance into the war on the side of the allies was delivered here on Wednesday by Premier Salandra. In speaking at a meeting of prominent persons who had gathered to take steps for the relief of the civil population during the war, the Premier hotly resented the imputation of Germany that the Italian cabinet had been "sold out to England, France and Russia."

The Premier reviewed the long diplomatic negotiations with Austria which preceded the war and used considerable information in his arguments that had been made public in the recent "green book."

Premier Salandra paid tribute to the power of Germany, saying: "Now I want to tell you that I do not want to speak of Germany without admiration. I am first a minister of Italy, not Chancellor of the German Empire. Consequently I do not lose my temper. But, though I have for Germany, her wonderful organization and her powers of resistance, due admiration with the best men of our nation, I say we will not consent to any state of vassalage.

"The dream of universal hegemony has been shattered. Any future peace and civilization must be based upon respect for the independence of all nations, among whom Germany will sit as the equal, but not the superior to any other.

ITALY'S ONE DESIRE.

"From King Victor Emmanuel, who is the interpreter of our national aspirations, down to the humblest family, the only desire is that we shall hand down to the future a stronger and more highly respected Italy—an Italy which will sit in the congress of world powers with dignity and authority—and will continue among them as a distributor of justice and civilization.

"Our generation has been given its mission to accomplish—the unity of the nation. Let us give our country all we have; let us bow before our King and kneel before our glorious flag.

"Let us be secure in the thought we will win."

The audience that listened to Premier Salandra was made up of cabinet members, deputies, senators, foreign diplomats and notables from private life. When the premier replied to the recent charges that had been made by Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg in Berlin, he was wildly cheered.

THUNDERS DENIAL.

"Modern war does not only concern the fighting force, but all those who remain at home. None can shirk his duty. He who wants to give the Fatherland his arm must also give it his mind and heart."

The last part of the speech was devoted to a repudiation of the charge that the Italian cabinet had been sold out to the entente powers.

"That," thundered Premier Salandra, "is an insult to the King and to every Italian, be he high or humble. I ask the people to judge my colleagues in the cabinet. The way the nation rose as one man for the Fatherland in this time of stress and hostile demonstrations against those who tried to avert war shows plainly there was no bargain."

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

[illegible]

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This masterstroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. [illegible] You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of Boston and vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

Le truppe austriache lavorano giorno e notte a fortificare le difese della colline a nord di Trieste e lungo la ferrovia di Nabresina.

RED SOX BATTLE YANKEES AGAIN

NEW YORK, June 3.—The straightened-out Red Sox get through in New York this afternoon and will arrive back in Boston bright and early tomorrow morning. They are out to make it three straight over the Yankees, and judging by the way they cleaned up yesterday will come precious near pulling the trick.

The bugs of Greater New York had been led to believe that the Red Sox were a badly demoralized club, and after the clan of Donovan threw the harpoon into the Washington Nationals twice running Monday, were confident that the Broadway Yets would take at least two of three games in the series and thus hold on to third position in the race.

Instead the Red Sox have bagged the two games thus far staged and so soft was their conquest yesterday that it surely looks as if Carrigan is commanding the superior club. Now that Larry Gardner is back on the third bag, Carrigan has all his warriors in position and the club is traveling on high speed.

Carrigan crossed the experts yesterday by pitching Ruth. The big fellow twirled a cracking good game and won just as he pleased. Shore is favored to go to the hillock today and if Carrigan makes a switch Ray Collins or Herb Pennock will draw the assignment. Marty McHale or Carroll Brown will probably be Bill Donovan's choice.

"The Rabbit's" Column
By Walter J. Maranville
SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Uncle Robbie, manager of the Brooklyns, has refused to waive on the services of Douglass, the erratic pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, who was recently suspended by Manager Herzog for violating the rules of discipline. Douglass may be a hard person to manage, but Robinson is willing to try. Herzog has scrapped with so many Cincinnati players that Douglass' misconduct may have been the result of a row. At any rate, Robinson believes that if he can make a deal for this big pitcher, who is a sterling right hander when in proper physical condition, the Dodgers' pennant chances will be greatly improved.

It is understood that Douglass is eager to wear a Brooklyn uniform, and has promised to be good if Robinson is able to secure title to his contract.

Here is an editorial from the Baltimore American, showing how the Feds are slipping there and the efforts made to keep them a-going:

"With the determination to keep Baltimore on the major league baseball map, a Go Once Club has been organized in response to a letter written to the Terrapin office and to the local newspapers by one signing himself "A Loyal Fan." Neat buttons with the Terrapin insignia on a white enameled field have been made with the words "I have been once; have you?" These buttons are for free distribution at the Terrapin office, Union Trust building.

"After many years of effort and the expenditure of much money the situation has worked to that point where Baltimore will always be on a big league map if the baseball proposition here is supported. Those familiar with the situation know that baseball peace is coming and the question now is to prove to the powers that be that Baltimore must be recognized in the redistribution of territory as a city of major league calibre.

"The way to prove this is at the turnstiles, for they are the true studies of the men that control the game. From a spirit of civic pride the idea is for every one in Baltimore and the suburbs to be able to say that he has been to see the Terrapins play at least once this season. Hence the formation of the Go Once Club."

It was remarked that the huge batting records of the year 1887 should be thrown out, inasmuch as that was "the year of the phantom hit," when a base on balls counted in the box score as a single. Tip O'Neill, with his wonderful 1887 batting record, .492, under those scoring rules, should be deposed as a slugging king, and some later record—probably one made by Cobb—should be ascended in the place of that built up by O'Neill.

Quite correct—and yet, to look at it from another point of view: O'Neill must have made whatever part of his record wasn't added through bases on balls against a heavy handicap, and should be given credit for actually accomplishing what would have been a mighty feat under the rules of any time.

True, O'Neill wasn't handicapped by a foul-strike rule—but, in 1887 a caught foul tip was an immediate out and not a strike. Again, he had no sacrifice hits or sacrifice flies deducted from his times at bat as the modern batsmen do. He was working against great pitchers, many of them, who were shooting from a fifty-foot distance and had a box to move around in instead of the slab that binds them down today. Last but not least, the scorers were severe upon the fielders then, and anything that was even clawed at went as an error.

Take all these things into consideration, and the impossibility of accurately comparing the ancient sluggers with the modern stars becomes doubly apparent. It can't be done. There is no way to rate or grade them, no way in which to estimate the figures rightly either way.

One man who will refuse to be peeved over failure of Detroit and St. Louis to reach a decision in second game of either Saturday or Sunday is Colonel Hedges, owner of the Browns. That's his best luck this season. His team gets a draw on decisions, and he has two extra games banked up on him.

Detroit is the best card St. Louis gets. Instead of eleven games, Colonel Hedges will have the club on his park for thirteen contests. He has two double-headers in, and two to come. And as Detroit is at St. Louis on Saturday and Sunday, September 4 and 5, he'll pick off some nice change, no doubt.

Apropos of double-header days, a situation arose in Pittsburgh on Saturday that is so unusual that only a small minority of fans have seen it duplicated. St. Louis was playing the Pirates. Rain fell in the fifth inning of the first game, when the score was 0 to 0 each. Time was called and rain continued for an hour. At the end of that period the two teams commenced a new game, the one they had been playing going into the record as an uncompleted no-score contest. St. Louis won the second game, 5 to 1.

This peculiar procedure was in accordance with the rules. The scheduled game—the first one played—was ended when the umpires called it, after waiting the legal limit under the rain rule. That, however, did not prevent the clubs from going through with the play-off of an earlier postponement. The day was done, as far as the schedule was concerned. The schedule does not govern a play-off.

BRAVES-GIANTS IN FINAL GAME

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

If the weather which prevailed in these parts yesterday continues today, there will be another game of ice hockey between the Braves and the Giants up at the Fenway Park rink. It will be the last game of the Braves on home grounds until July 5, for tonight directly after the game they leave on their first Western trip. They figure to start the battle today at 2 o'clock so that they can finish the game and make the train.

The Braves are in second place today, that is they are tied up with the Phillies and Brooklyns for that position in the National League race. It therefore behooves Manager Stallings and his men to sweep the Giants off the ice this afternoon. Doubtless James will pitch for the Braves, while the chances are Rube Marquard will hurl left-handed shoots for the Giants. It ought to be a tight game, unless the Giants get to hitting James. The Rube has been going quite well this season and is expected to make the Braves do considerable guessing, providing he goes in the box.

McGraw has been canned from the coaching lines in both games so far. The question of the hour is: "Will McGraw make it three straight cans?" We do not like to make disparaging remarks about umpires, but if Quigley cans McGraw for the third time today we won't blame McGraw.

Columbia Crew on Scene of Big Race

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 3.—The Columbia rowing squad of thirty-four men, under Coach Rice, arrived here to begin final practice for the big college regatta.

The Columbia oarsmen are the first to arrive and will be followed early next week by the Penn and Leland Stanford oarsmen. Among the oarsmen arriving with Columbia today was Harry Naumer, who rowed bow on the championship New York crew last year, but was not available during the Winter, due to his strenuous course at the medical school. Naumer will try, even at this late date, to break into Jim Rice's varsity.

Hoffmire Elected Cornell Captain

ITHACA, N. Y., June 3.—The Cornell track team elected John Hoffmire captain for next year. Hoffmire first came into prominence in the Fall of his sophomore year, and now ranks as one of the greatest distance runners Jack Moakley has ever turned out. He never ran before he entered the university and he is a self-supporting student.

A. of Worcester at the New England Fair grounds, Worcester, Saturday, July 3. The events are sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. A. U. and are as follows: 100-yard dash, 440 yards, 880 yards and one mile runs; 120-yard high hurdles, running high jump and shot put.

Rod and Gun.

Considerable interest is being shown among trap shooters in the annual team match which takes place at Wellington, June 17. This is the big event of the season and two teams of thirty men each, comprised of the best shooters locally, will be pitted against one another. Bob Smith, the well-known sporting man will captain one of the teams, while Carrol Day will heed the other.

* * *

Dr. A. T. Stegelmann of this city, has just returned from Parlin Pond. He states that the weather was very cold and fish were not biting as they might at this season, although he admitted that he had fairly good luck.

* * *

George H. Chapin of Brookfield, did some rather fine shooting at Goffstown at the club's annual two-day tournament. The first day George broke 155 clay targets out of 160, and on the second 151, which are as good scores as have been reported around here for some time.

* * *

C. S. Temple of this city, shooting at the Goffstown Gun Club, Manchester, N. H., carried away first honors, breaking 143 clays out of 160. Being a handicap match, he was tied in with a number of others and was obliged to shoot off twice, both times breaking a clean twenty-five.

Wrestler Aberg Wins Match in Big Tourney

Thirty Days More an Tours Contest Ends

Many of the candidates in the American's California Tours Co have made inquiries as to the kind of weather that might reasonabl expected in California during July and August when the tourists wi there.

Some seem to feel that the California climate will be extremely in mid-Summer. The facts prove this to be far from the case.

California in Summer is cool, with no rain—in Winter, delightful without snow or blizzard. Even as far north as San Francisco there have been only twenty-seven days in twenty years when the temperature exceeded ninety degrees.

When Balboa, centuries ago, looked over the Pacific and christened his discovery "El Dorado," the "Land of Gold," he little thought how true his words would be and still less could he have foreseen that the country he had found would prove an El Dorado in a still greater sense.

The American's tourists will see in California the greatest pleasure ground in the world. All through such towns as Pasadena, Del Monte, Santa Barbara, San Diego, Los Angeles and countless other places there are beautiful residences, marvelous estates and perfectly entrancing scenery.

California is a mecca for the weary and those who seek the perfect in nature.

The American's Tours will take place at a time when California i also a mecca for those who want to know what the various countries ha been doing in the way of progress in the arts and industries.

The magnificent palaces at San Francisco will prove an object less to all who will look. They will register world steps in the forward mar of the universe. And by a very carefully planned tour of sight-seeing, t guests of the American will be able to accurately compare the progress their own countrymen with the progress of the rest of mankind ar moreover, they will have occasion to be proud of the comparison.

Meanwhile, do not forget that this contest is rapidly nearing its er Series "E" is more than half over today, and there is only one more S ("F") of fifteen days and one Series ("G") of nine days. Then some tw five enthusiastic vote collectors will be entitled to this Tour DE L to the Pacific Coast and the marvelous Expositions.

GLOVER-BRITTON BATTLE, JUNE 22

By JACK CONWAY.

MIKE GLOVER, the clever South Boston welterweight, has been matched to meet Jack Britton of Chicago in a twelve-round bout which will be staged at the Atlas A. A. on June 22. The men agreed to make 140 pounds for the contest.

It is not believed that either Britton or Glover will experience any difficulty in reducing to this poundage. Britton usually fights around 138 pounds, while Glover only weighed 138 pounds when he weighed in for his encounter with Wells, according to George Freeman, his manager.

This will be the third meeting between Glover and Britton. Each boxer has one victory to his credit and they should have a merry battle for supremacy when they meet at the Arena.

Glover will go to Highland Lake next Monday, where he will get into condition for the set-to.

JOE CHICK, the Gloucester middleweight, will resume hostilities in the ring tonight. Chick is scheduled to meet Pete Malone of Philadelphia in a twelve-round bout which will be held before the Fairview A. A. in Southbridge. The contest has aroused considerable interest among the up-State "fans" and a large crowd is expected to turn out to witness the festivities.

Chick and Malone should put up a rugged tussle. The Gloucester middleweight does not know a whole lot about the fine points of the glove game, but he is aggressive and usually gives satisfaction. Malone has met such men as Tommy Coleman, Joe Barrell and Tommy Howell.

Jimmy Carroll of Brooklyn and Johnny Boyle, the Lowell boxer, will sh in the semi-final match.

VE POWERS, the Malden welterweight, is preparing for a fifteend ring contest with "K. O." tz which will take place at New on on June 9. Powers is con that he will dispose of Palitz. e men have already met once. bout was held in New London Powers scored with a dream in the third frame.

The cago lightweight landed close to ty punches flush on Thomas' jaw, cording to the Philadelphia papers, ut he was unable to stop his opponent. Thomas kept forcing the fighting and scored repeatedly with solid blows to the head and body. White was in poor condition when the tussle ended and was unable to leave the ring for five minutes.

Fresh Favors for Fans

By H. W. LANIGAN

Sometimes it pays to switch hurlers and sometimes it doesn't. In St. Louis yesterday Charley Herzog pulled Rube Benton, in front, 4 to 3, after little Betzel opened the eighth essay with a hit. Jean Dale was sent in to relieve Rube. Snyder poled safely and "Ham" Hyatt he walked. Soused house. Beck belted out a double and in came the tying and winning runs.

To get back to the statement that sometimes it proves profitable to switch your boxmen, and sometimes it doesn't, recalls to mind a Bill Murray story. The old leader of the Phils and later scout of the Pirates quoth thusly once upon a time in telling what a crazy game baseball is: "It was mixed up badly enough when I was a manager. Now I'm a scout and what do you think they do? They send me out to get hitters who can bump the pitchers, and also dig up pitchers the hitters cannot bump. Sure'n it's a mixed-up, crazy game any way you take it."

Now to get back in Missouri. Two of the Cards' early runs came when the pillows were packed. Strangely, it was Scatter Sallee, the Higginsport Huckleberry, who drew the timely promenade each time.

* * *

Cozy Dolan was the big man in the field for the Cards. He is credited with having pulled down six liners, cutting off six well-intended extra-base smacks.

The little things hurt in baseball just as much as in the big game of life. For instance, out in Cleveland yesterday Pitcher Hagerman failed to cover first when Gloomy Gus Williams of the Browns bounded to Wood in the fourth round and it paved the way for three runs and a certain St. Louis victory. Had Hagerman covered it would have made the third out. But he didn't and the three counts came in. That bevy settled the curtailed showlet beyond recall.

* * *

There were some fireworks following the Hagerman carelessness. Chapman then mussed up Leary's grounder, little Lavan tripled, and after Hank Severeid walked, Lavan scored when Kid Turner dropped O'Neill's chuck on an attempted double steal. The Browns' first run — and it was really enough, as the Indians were blanked—came from a gift to Austin, a bum heave by O'Neill and Pratt's one spot.

* * *

Earl Hamilton went the route for the Browns and had the clan of Fohl eating out of his hand all the way. Many a run came ere J. P. made the athletes beat it at the end of No. 6. Cleveland's clouts totaled but three. Now, Hamilton is the youth who was Bob Hedges' bad boy and who some four or five weeks ago got fined $500 and set down indefinitely for getting out of shape. We have the hunch Ham will get all his money back. Hence, one Dutch Leonard should climb in the band wagon. Then, Dutch has more at stake than Ham, as Dutch has one fat, buxom, elegant chance to be on a championship copper, while we doubt most sincerely if the Browns will run first.

Yesterday it was Ty Cobb, not Eddie Collins, who starred in the White Sox-Tiger matinee. Benz and Coveleski had a rip-roaring nifty setto for two-thirds of the route. Nary a run had come. For the Hose in No. 7 Collins and Fournier bunched singles and Shano Collins came through with a safe bunt while trying to pull the squeeze.

* * *

Chicago bugs were confident that run would settle matters. But the Tigers got to Benz in No. 8 and quickly put the matinee on the blink. Cobb started by punching out a hit. Crawford only doubled. Kavanagh and Young singled together. Result: Three runs.

Cobb put together the final tally practically all by himself in the ninth. He belted safely, stole both second and third and came in on Veach's infield single.

When the White Sox hit Fenway Park tomorrow Breton, not Roth, will be on third, and Quinlan, not Happy Felch, will be in centre. Breton has taken the third bag away from Roth, while Felch has a sprained ankle and won't even come to town with the charges of Master Clarence Rowland.

The Phillies were flopped twice by the Dodgers. As a result there's a three-cornered tie for second place between our Braves, the Dodgers and the Phils. Our boys would have been fourth but for Larry Doyle's kindness. Mitch has told all about that play of Larry's at Fenway Park. It was SOME play.

Eddie Plank and Ed Reulbach won their games in sparkling style in the Federal League. Thus far this campaign Old Man Plank has demonstrated every indication of being just as good as ever. By the by, Bender loses almost every time he starts.

A carnival guy, touring the South with a dinky show some years ago, had on exhibition as one of his chief attractions a giant whose stature booted exactly five feet two inches. Needless to say there were a lot of squawks when the rubes forked over their dimes and got a peep at the alleged massive gent. The best the squawkers ever got was, "Tush-tush, brother, don't bellow. Yon young man is the smallest giant in the world." And that's how Jawn McGraw's giants appeal to us this Summer. If it's fair to call them Giants then it's only proper to call limburger a fruit.

Columbia Player Sets New Record

NEW YORK, June 3.—Bobby Watt established a record in college baseball with the conclusion of the season at Columbia. According to the Columbia official scorer the speedy second baseman went through the season without an error. He played all the nineteen games on the schedule, accepting sixty-seven chances.

In only one game has he been charged by any scorer of making an error. That was at Fordham last Saturday, when a hard hit grounder got past him. He batted .380 for the season. Watt is considered a sure choice for captain of the 1916 team.

Red Sox Buy Rodgers; Release McNally

NEW YORK, June 3.—Bill Rodgers recent infielder of the Cleveland team, is today the property of the Red Sox and will join his new team within a few days. Rodgers was a sensation in the Coast League and bought by Cleveland for a big price, but it is stated that Lannin purchased him at a fair price.

Mike McNally, the utility infielder of the Red Sox, has been released to Providence in an effort to strengthen the Grays, who have been shot to pieces by sickness and injuries.

Miss H. Curtis Third in Title Golf Play

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, won the championship of the Women's Eastern Golf Association with a score of 180 for 36 holes. Mrs. R. H. Barlow was second and Miss Harriot Curtis of Boston was third. Miss Curtis turned in a card 159.

WOLGAST BEATEN IN CROSS BOUT

NEW YORK, June 3.—Leach Cross took Ad Wolgast, the Michigan Wildcat, on for ten rounds at St. Nicholas Rink and incidentally handed the old champion a terrible trouncing. For seven rounds it was a meeting of two genuine sluggers, but after that session Wolgast began to weaken and in the next three rounds he was battered around like a shuttlecock.

CROSS STARTS OFF FAST.

After the usual confab in the centre Referee Roche gave the high sign and the boys started. Cross lammed two rights to head, but Wolgast kept walking in and let Leachie feel a left swing on his feature. Then Leachie let his left and right pound on Wolgast's jaw, but the iron boy kept boring in and took all the wallops, trying to whip in his left, which he managed to get over twice when Cross missed his right. Leach jabbed Wolgast with lefts a dozen times and cracked him flush with rights when the bell sounded.

Leach started the second smothering Wolgast with right and left hooks. Suddenly Ad let one good left crash to Leach's jaw and Cross staggered. He pulled his famous stall to get time and then jumped into a clinch. Then the Leachee started a rally and plastered Wolgast without a return.

The third round found both warriors wild and slamming away like swinging doors. Wolgast was rushing Cross around and in the close got over two corking lefts.

The fast pace forced both to slow up in the fourth. In one melee Cross slipped, but was up in a flash. Wolgast had started a wallop which caught Leach, but did no damage. Wolgast shoved his mitt out and everything was off.

CROSS JABS AD. OFTEN.

They started clinching in the fifth and kept walloping away while embracing. Wolgast landed a bear of a left to the body, and after getting a million left jabs on the chin, slammed Leach on the jaw twice. Cross, worked up by these stingers, drove Wolgast around until the bell.

Quite some excitement popped up in the sixth when Wolgast hooked his old left to Leachie's jaw and the dentist took an "Annette Kellerman." He got up and rested on one knee for a count of nine seconds and then resumed. Wolgast tried to finish the job, but Leaches would not have it. Cross covered up and continued shooting his left over. The more he landed the more Wolgast laughed.

The former champion mixed steadily in the seventh and then began to feel the kick of Leachie's right. The Cross haymaker kept hopping on Wolgast's jaw with Leachies entire weight behind it. The blows told on Ad, and when the bell clanged he walked to his corner tired.

Cross kept his steady battering in the eighth and handed Wolgast a terrible lacing. The Michigan wildcat tried to fight back, but the old stamina was slipping fast. After being backed all around the ring with a shower of left jabs and right hooks Wolgast slopped in his corner from exhaustion.

The ninth was nothing but a display of gameness on the part of Wolgast, for he missed few of Cross's blows and couldn't land one in return.

Wolgast made a desperate rally in the tenth and landed a few lefts to the body, but the kick wasn't there. Leach kept up that pitiless jabbing with the left, and then stuck a terrible right in hard enough to add to the disfigurement of Wolgast's countenance.

When I was young I never felt a yearning
To be a fat and bloated millionaire
I never spent my youthful days in learning
To cop the kale and shoot the heated air
I never yearned to be a private banker

Nor never in my lifetime did I hanker
To smite a stranger with a leaden pipe.

When I was young I read the wondrous story
Of Buffalo Bill and others of his kind,
Their hero stunts and other forms of glory
Were almost first and foremost in my mind
I always loved to read of this and that boy
Who started stunts that led to world-wide fame,
But in my youth I yearned to be a bat boy—
I'll bet, dear reader, you have felt the same.

LYNN BIKE STAR TO RACE CHAMPION

Elmer Collins, the Lynn [illegible], will be an added starter in the motor-paced race at the Revere Cycle Track Saturday night. It was the original intention of Manager Nat Butler to start only George Seres, the wonderful French rider, and George Wiley, but Collins rode so well last Saturday evening that Butler believes he will make a good match for Seres and Wiley. Therefore, he has turned the race into a three-cornered twenty-five mile affair.

Seres has already arrived at Revere. He will begin work immediately. He is anxious to get acquainted with the turns on the beach saucer which accounts for his early arrival.

Besides the motor-paced race Saturday night, there will be a sprint match between Alf Grenda, the big Tasmanian [illegible], and Marcel Dupuy, a French rider of considerable note.

An idea of Dupuy's calibre may be obtained from the fact that he teamed up "Reggie" McNamara, who gave Al Goullet such a stubborn battle in Boston's last six-day race. Grenda, too, is going at top speed.

MORE INDORSEMENT GIVEN TO AMERICAN'S STREET CAMPAIGN

John R. Murphy, chairman of the Finance Commission, Robert J. Bottomly, secretary of the Good Government Association and Ralph S. Fickett, chairman of the Committee on Streets of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, today indorsed the AMERICAN'S campaign for better streets in Boston.

The Chamber of Commerce's committee, of which Alphonso Fickett is the head, is conducting a thorough investigation into Boston street conditions.

Chairman Murphy [illegible] that he could not [illegible] problem in behalf of the Finance Commission, the [illegible] upon the wisdom of [illegible] by the city and which was in the grove at [illegible] of all such loans by the city. But speaking personally, Chairman Murphy gave emphatic indorsement of the AMERICAN'S efforts to secure good streets for the city.

Secretary Bottomly also with equal emphasis supported the AMERICAN'S campaign.

By JOHN R. MURPHY.

Speed the Boston AMERICAN and its work for better streets. To say that good streets and clean streets are among the city's best advertisements is to utter a platitude. Nevertheless, it is the streets, their general condition as to cleanliness and state of repair, that greet the eye of every visitor and stranger.

Street conditions, good or bad, is apparent here to the [illegible]. If the streets are in poor condition it cannot be hidden. There is nothing that gives one a deeper impression as to the worth of a community than the condition of its streets.

This is all apart from the value of good streets with regard to health and facilitating traffic. That Boston should have the best streets possible is a universal opinion. Owing to my official position as chairman of the Finance Commission, I must decline to enter into any controversy as how and when the money for putting Boston's streets into shape should be obtained.

By ROBERT J. BOTTOMLY.

The AMERICAN'S campaign is a good thing, and I am with it. No one doubts the condition our streets are in. If they did, they would be disillusioned by seeing them.

The campaign is timely and will have the effect of stirring citizens generally to demand action. For something be done.

The AMERICAN is wise not to advocate any particular method of raising the money. Go on and foster demand and work through publicity until we get, not $500,000 but $1,000,000. We could use it in making the streets what they ought to be.

By RALPH S. FICKETT.

The AMERICAN is to be praised for its campaign for better streets. It has gone into the subject thoroughly.

The committee of which I am chairman is hard at work trying to do its share of the task of solving Boston's street problem. We know the actual conditions. But just what to recommend in detail is another matter.

The committee is investigating in the fullest way. It is inquiring into what other cities are doing. We intend to make an exhaustive report, but just what that will be I cannot, of course, say.

MAYOR CURLEY AND STORROW AGREE HALF MILLION IS NEEDED

Mayor Curley, discussing today his recent inspection of Boston's bad streets with Councillor James J. Storrow, declared that the latter seemed to be very much impressed with the necessity of doing something at once to better the city's street conditions.

The Mayor said: "With very few exceptions, the streets we passed over in the downtown district were in urgent need of repair.

"Some of them, especially the streets where the high pressure mains are being installed, are in a terrible condition.

"Councillor Storrow agreed with me that if we had $500,000 available to start this work, it should be used in the downtown section exclusively for laying granite paving blocks set in cement foundation, which makes the best and most durable streets in the world."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks ranged higher at the opening in Boston and New York markets and trading was in greater volume subsequently than for some time. Confidence was more pronounced and the delicate relations between this country and Germany were of little influence upon securities. There appeared to be more appreciation of the extent of this country's prosperity at present and a belief that everything is shaping towards a great expansion in its ordinary trade. There is less and less disposition to dispose of stocks at the present price level and less haste on the part of prospective buyers than they will be able to get them cheaper.

GAINS IN BOTH MARKETS.

Within a few minutes after the start gains in New York included Amalgamated 1¼, Chino 1⅛, Utah 1¼, American Can ¾, U. S. Steel 1, Bethlehem Steel 3, Crucible Steel 1⅛, American Locomotive 1, Goodrich 1⅛, General Electric 2⅛, Mexican Petroleum 1⅛, Westinghouse 1¼, American Smelting 2⅛, Canadian Pacific 1, N. Y. Central ¾, New Haven ¾, Reading 1⅛, Southern Pacific ¾, St. Paul 1⅛ and Union Pacific ¾.

Among advances in Boston were Alaska Gold ½, Butte & Superior 1⅛, American Zinc 1⅛, Arizona Commercial ⅛, Calumet & Arizona ½, Copper Range ½, Granby ½, North Butte ¼, Quincy 1⅛, U. S. Smelting 2, United Fruit 1 and New Haven 1.

Zinc and malt issues were the most active stocks, but coppers were in more demand than they were yesterday morning. In fact, the local market had more breadth today. Later in the first hour the price range was higher than above gains would indicate.

GERMANY AND SPELTER PRICE.

In commenting upon the condition of the spelter market, the American Metal Market [illegible] is offering any of that material and that business is being done only on bids. "It is suggested," this publication states, "that there may be a possible manipulation going on under the direction of German interests with the object of keeping spelter away from the makers of war supplies and thereby limiting the amount of ammunition shipped to the allies. Interesting if true and it may be true."

BETTER TONE IN LONDON.

It is said that there was a better tone to American issues in the London market. This was due to the rise in New York yesterday. Canadian Pacific advanced 2 points in the London market before trading began in New York, but later lost the gain and then receded further.

The Bank of England in its weekly statement reports its proportion of reserve to liabilities to be 20.28 per cent, compared with 21.49 a week ago. Its bullion decreased about $15,-175,000.

G. FRED WILLIAMS LAUDS WALSH VETO

George Fred Williams, in a statement to the AMERICAN, praises Governor Walsh's veto of the New Haven validation bill.

By GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS.

I think that Governor Walsh has done right in his vetoes of the New Haven bills. The reasons assigned by him are entirely sufficient.

With four great States involved in the New Haven management, there has not yet been a proper investigation of the management of the railroad.

It is utterly contrary to the public interests that a great public servant like this common carrier should be allowed through many years to defy the laws and to conduct [illegible] questionable transactions without a thorough official inquiry into the transactions which have loaded such a tremendous burden of debt on one of the best railroad properties in the world.

"I have agreed heartily with those who wished to go to the utmost possible lengths in rescuing this corporation from financial embarrassment, but legislation should not be enacted to cover wrongdoings of so indefinite character and to justify invasions of the law, which to a great extent at least should be borne by the stockholders.

STATE ENTITLED TO KNOW.

Governor Walsh's position is that he finds that the legislation as enacted is likely to be the basis of enlarged freight and passenger charges and he is quite justified in demanding that before this burden is [illegible] upon the public the State of Massachusetts should know to what extent this railroad has been plundered by those who have had charge of it.

Numerous railroads have been investigated in this country in a thorough manner. But somehow all the attempted investigations of the New Haven Railroad have failed to reach the wrongdoing, even including the Interstate Commerce Commission's inquiries.

To justify capitalizing at the expense of the public all the dealings of this road in illegitimate promotion, without even ascertaining the extent of the wrongdoings which have bankrupted that road, would be a wrong to future generations, who must pay the charges.

SHOULD REFUSE TO BE COVER.

The investigation demanded by Governor Walsh should be made, and if the interstate commerce character of the road is made to interfere with a thorough expose of that railroad's transactions, Massachusetts should refuse to serve as a cover for the unjustifiable methods of the road.

No one can say at present how much the capital of the railroad must be reduced by a sale of its illegitimate properties, and the proper course seems to me is to liquidate the assets which do not belong legitimately to the railroad and then take up, with full knowledge of the facts, the question of capitalization and charges.

The Legislature, in refusing Governor Walsh's demand for an investigation as proposed by the Public Service Commission, has not done its plain duty to the business interests and the people of Massachusetts.

STOCKHOLDERS RESPONSIBLE.

While stockholders are entitled to every consideration, it is a significant fact that during all the questionable transactions of this road no protest has come seasonably from the stockholders against the methods employed by the management. Under these circumstances the stockholders must bear the responsibility for their own failure and it should not be loaded upon the business men of New England and upon generations to come.

Let the truth be known and Massachusetts may be as lenient as it chooses. But with the truth consistently concealed in a manner unexampled in the history of railroading in the United States, no further steps should be taken by Massachusetts to relieve those who are responsible for the ruin of their own great property.

I know that Governor Walsh desires as earnestly as I do myself, to give early consideration to this railroad, but it must first lay bare the facts and the Legislature may then, in the full light of the truth, act intelligently and justly. It cannot possibly do so under existing conditions.

Suffering Is Good for Us--- Makes Us Work

There Is No Good Book on Political Economy. The Best "Book" on Astronomy Is the Sky. An Answer to an Intelligent School Teacher

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company

We have a letter from an intelligent young woman who teaches in a Western high school.

This sample of American womanhood earns more than fourteen hundred dollars a year, does her work well beyond question, is entitled to the gratitude of the nation, and especially of the generation to come.

The ordinary citizen would say that she ought to be satisfied, doing good work and getting satisfactory pay. But she is not satisfied, wants to know more about this world and the worlds outside of it, and in her letter asks for advice as to the best books on Astronomy and "the best book" on Political Economy.

We do not want to give any flippant answer to an earnest woman. But we must repeat here the advice we should give to every young woman, and that is MARRY.

The one thing in a chain is strength, and the most important thing is that no link shall break.

You, young lady, are a link in a chain that stretches back to the beginning of human intelligence on this planet. You have no right to break if you can help it.

If you die without children you are the link that breaks, and the chain that courageous men and women carried on through horrible centuries that you might live in semi-civilization will be broken.

The work that any man or woman can do in a short lifetime is as nothing compared to what may be done by thousands of descendants. Inspiration, education, the influence of the mother upon the child, are more important than anything else in human progress.

You do good work in your class, of course; work that comes NEXT to motherhood. But the direction that you might give to two or three young minds created by yourself is more important than all.

It is possible to do good work such as you do, even though it may not satisfy the highest aspirations, and keep other work, astronomy and geology, of which you speak, as a mental stimulant.

Man has a body and a brain. The brain should endure the dullness in life while the body does the hard work, and the brain finds its comfort in thought.

The director of the Mount Hamilton Observatory, Dr. Campbell, or his assistant, Mr. Aitken, the greatest "double star man" in the world, you will find a friendly adviser if you write to either of them concerning books on astronomy.

Ball is good. You can get his various books on astronomy at the library. Dr. Campbell himself has just written a book on the movement of the stars in space, published by the Yale University Press. It is not too technical for intelligence such as yours.

The astronomers sneer at Flammarion, but he is full of suggestion and courage, and you can detect and reject the superficial.

The best astronomy ever written, in the opinion of some astronomers, is that of Newcomb.

There is an excellent text book on astronomy by M. Houlton, which can be recommended.

There are no definitely good books on Economics—that is to say, no permanently accurate books. Practical men strive to make of Economics a science accurate and permanent.

That is absolutely impossible, in the present stage of human development.

There is no use in laying down rules as to what is wise or unwise, since it is necessary now that men should be unhappy and suffer in order to make them go forward.

Newton had a government salary while he was working out his vast problems. No economist regrets that. But every economist will tell you that if you gave a government salary to the average man the world would go to smash, and civilization with it. Individual effort would cease.

More than nine hundred and ninety thousand men out of a million must suffer in order to make them work.

And they must work harder in order to make their work better.

Therefore for the present, and probably for some centuries to come, the best economic system will be one inflicting suffering upon the workers, sorrow upon the mothers, and presenting a fairly good imitation of hell on earth.

As a teacher, you know, of course, the names of the principal economic writers and the principal books.

Ruskin, despised by many teachers, has probably written as much economic truth as any man. Henry George, in "Progress and Poverty," has presented well theories which have done great good in stimulating thought.

If you wrote a letter to the Professor of Political Economy at Johns Hopkins University, or any other large university, he would probably give you a list of the latest books now considered the best.

If we had to write a book on Economics it would be a short one, and would read about as follows:

"What can be done in the present state of civilization to diminish suffering, poverty and anxiety without eliminating the desperate, brutal, selfish struggle that alone produces real effort among half savage human beings?"

That would be the end of the book, because we should not answer our own question, except with the unsatisfactory words, "Time and evolution."

You express dissatisfaction because you have devoted a good deal of your life to "studying family expenditures," teaching young minds, etc. Whoever does one thing well should not be discouraged.

Each of the little creatures building up a coral island had to create his little particle of coral substance, and die in doing it.

The sum total of the efforts of those tiny creatures brought their work to the surface of the water. They never saw the real world, or the sunlight, never knew what they were building.

We are the creatures building a similar island, called civilization, and each of us ought to be glad to contribute his small particle—although none of us will get above the surface or see the real civilization of which we are laying the foundation.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

A Dream

I saw him smiling as he slept;
  A joy it was to trace
The look of ecstasy that crept
  Across the little face.
Some dream of fairyland I thought
  Enkindled that soft smile,
Some gold and purple vision caught
  From an enchanted isle.
He woke, the blue eyes fairly beamed;
  He sighed; I heard him say
In sleepy accents: "Gee, I dreamed
  That school was out today!"

Three Varieties

DUGGINS sells the rural chaps, who come to see the town,
  Nice corner lots in Franklin Park for fifty dollars down.
He does a very tidy trade; a single sale a day
Enables him with perfect ease to keep the wolf away.
But on his enterprise the cops with little favor look
And they are always after him, for Duggins is a crook.

GRIMMAGE peddles villa plots that you would never know
  Were anywhere upon the map unless the tide was low.
He does a thriving business, yet he has a haunting fear
That something will turn up some time to blight his bright career.
His dreams are often visions of a troubled time hereafter.
A time of stripes and pounding stone, for Grimmage is a grafter.

FINK is free from worriment; he always sleeps o' nights;
  His game is selling cities real estate for railroad sites.
He multiplies the price by ten; his work is pretty raw,
But everything he puts across is sanctioned by the law.
And though he draws the laws himself there isn't any fear
That he will be accused of theft, for Fink's a financier.

Put Ban on Snifflers to Prevent Colds

By Woods Hutchinson, A. M., M. D.

MOST of the new commandments of the Health Decalogue are positive and social, but a few of the most life-saving ones are negative and exclusive—in form at least. First and foremost among these comes the precept, "Thou shalt have no dealings with him that sniffleth." But it is also a commandment with a promise and emphatically entitled to be followed by the refrain:

"That thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

And the earlier in life we learn to practice this precept, the longer will our days be.

This is not to condemn or judge harshly the sniffler, poor fellow—he may be more sniffled against than sniffling. Indeed, the chief thing that makes him dangerous—in the [illegible] language of the day, anti-social—is his utter unselfishness, his generosity, his willingness to divide his last sniff with every one he meets. Like Falstaff, he can say truthfully:

"I am not only sniffy in myself, but I am
The cause of the sniffs that are in other men."

This is why we are unkind enough to attempt to add the insult of isolation to the injury of a cold in the head. Unto him, that hath (a cold) shall be given—other colds; his misery loves company, and usually gets it.

* * *

BUT why should we make such a fuss about a mere cold in the head? Up to a decade or so ago its very name was a synonym for the most trivial and negligible of ailments. The story is preserved of a famous physician who was once asked by an anxious young mother, "Doctor, what is the best way to treat a cold in the head?"

"With contempt, madam, with contempt!" boomed the great man.

We have got bravely over that attitude, because the microscope and the culture tube have shown us that colds are contagious—true infections—and that an infection is like a fire, easy to start, but no telling where it will stop.

A blaze that a smouldering match has started may defy the whole fire department before it is put out; and while ninety-nine colds out of a hundred are trifles, the consequences of the hundredth may be, and are, rheumatism, Bright's disease, arterio-sclerosis, heart disease and neuritis—half the so-called diseases of civilization.

The germs of influenza, the streptococci of sore throat, the bacilli of tonsilitis, seem to be little more than harmless house cats—mere tame kittens that play about in the corners of nose and throat, but it must never be forgotten that they are of the true tiger breed, and can grow to man-eating size with painful rapidity under proper encouragement.

Indeed, the recent brilliant experiments of Rosenow strongly suggest that our tonsils, our gums and our noses are simply hatching places where, in little abscess incubators, streptococci, or ordinary pus germs, are acclimated and trained until they have adapted themselves to lodge and grow in the appendix, the joints, the lungs or the stomach. So that a chronic sore throat, or catarrh, or ulcerated gums, may be the birthplace of appendicitis, rheumatism, pneumonia and ulcers of the stomach. A clean mouth is as important in the health religion of the future as a clean heart was in that of the past. At least two-thirds of our serious internal inflammations and of our grave chronic diseases are now traceable to the direct effects of common infections, often of very mild ones.

BUT what is the use of trying to avoid colds? Colds are everywhere. But they are not. Colds are only in those who have them. Keep away from those who have colds and you'll never catch one. Cave sniffem—"beware of the bug." By this sign ye shall know them—"A-sh-tchoo!" "Tchff-suff!"

Of course, in our present unintelligent and half-civilized state this sounds like an impossible counsel of perfection, but the nearer we can come to it the more disasters and suffering will be avoided. Colds begin with single individuals and spread or "run through" families, schools, offices, hotels—yes, hospitals. Catch the first individuals as soon as they begin to sneeze, keep them in a comfortable room by themselves, or out on a porch, or, in fine weather, in the open air for a few days—nobody ever caught a cold in the open air—and all their chain of victims will be cut off.

THE best and most intelligent schools are now beginning to excuse and send home at once every child that begins to sneeze, or cough, or run at the nose, or water at the eyes. When the heads of office forces and the managers of stores and the foremen of factories begin to display the same intelligence we shall see a huge diminution of colds and sore throats and their dangerous after effects.

It will pay the victim and his teacher or employer just as well as it will the community. For the work which he will do when "stuffed with a cold" will be poor work, and often full of mistakes, which may disorganize the whole establishment, to say nothing of the havoc created by the spread of the epidemic.

The same method should be applied to the chronic "carrier"—the dull-eyed and pasty-complexioned individual who goes about hawking and sneezing, scattering seeds of kindness up and down through the whole community. Regular crops of cases of colds, sore throats and bronchitis can be traced to a single such individual, employed as waiter, chambermaid, cook, janitor, milkman, iceman, or attendant of any sort.

Send these "radiators" to have a thorough housecleaning and renovating of their noses, throats and teeth, and you will not only protect the community, but improve their own health and increase their efficiency 20 or 30 per cent.

In fact, a ban upon snifflers would be cruel only in appearance, because it would result in even more benefit to them than to any one else in the community.

Red eyes, a "stuffy" nose, a flushed face, a tickling cough, a sore, hot throat—these are the early signs of scarlet fever, of pneumonia, of bronchitis, of typhus, of smallpox, of measles, and often diphtheria. So that all that sniffles is not colds by any means. And to keep a safe distance from any one showing this combination of danger signals, or any part of them, will protect us from a score of dangers.

Salve of Appreciation, Dorothy Dix Shows, Is Greatest Cure-All

By Dorothy Dix

DO you know what would do more to grease the wheels of life, and make them run smoothly than anything else in the world?

Just a little judicious application of the salve of appreciation.

Appreciation is the magic that takes the weariness out of toil, the bitterness out of sacrifice, and that makes all of our striving worth while. It puts fresh courage in our souls, new hope in our hearts, more strength in our arms. It is fame, it is achievement, it is success. It spans the most sordid life with a rainbow of glory.

Appreciation is the answer to half of the conundrums over which philosophers and scientists puzzle their brains in vain. And just because it is so simple, so easy, and so cheap, they will have none of it.

It's the great cure-all for so many ills, and the pity of it is that with the remedy in our hands, so few of us have sense enough to use it.

If you are an employer and want to speed up the people who work for you, and make them give you better service, just try showing a little appreciation of good work, and loyalty, and faithfulness. Of course, that isn't the orthodox manner in which an employer usually behaves. The prevailing idea is that the boss should have an eagle eye out for every fault in his employes, and be as blind as a bat to their virtues. If Smith and Brown are five minutes late dock them for it, or read the riot act to them. If they work overtime in a rush, say nothing about it. Just take that for granted. If little Miss Smith makes one blunder in a letter, scold her for it, but be mum as the grave about the ninety and nine times that she is letter perfect.

If there's anything that will take the spirit out of a man and make him feel that it doesn't make any difference whether he turns out a mediocre job, or one that is superlative, it is to have the perfect assurance that there'll never be any commendation of his work or indication of appreciation given by those in authority. It kills pride in one's occupation, it puts the brakes on energy and ambition to know that there are to be no medals and blue ribbons for us no matter what our achievement.

A Spur to Know

On the other hand, it is a spur in our side to know that our toil does not go unrewarded, and that somebody understands and appreciates our efforts to do our best. Why, I have seen a gray-haired, stoop-shouldered old bookkeeper straighten up, and look as if he had had his wages doubled at just a word of praise for his accuracy from his employer. And I have seen the tired, wan look slip from a weary shop girl's face at a customer's courteous thanks to her for the trouble she had taken with trying to please her.

Appreciation is the one and only solution of the domestic problem, and the only antidote for divorce that will work. Why do men roam away from home and seek affinities? Not because any man in his sober senses thinks that happiness is to be found in leading the double life. He knows better. Not because he is beauty mad and seeking a younger and fairer face. Most of the affinities I've ever beheld—and I've seen dozens of them—weren't half as good looking or attractive as the wives who had been deserted for them.

No. The real reason the average man who wanders off after an affinity does so is because he gets no appreciation at home, and what he's out on a still hunt for is not love, nor excitement but appreciation. The poor fellow is tired of toiling like a dray horse from morning till night for a wife who takes everything she can get out of him without ever once making a noise that sounds even remotely like gratitude, or giving any indication that she thinks that there is anything fine, or noble about him, or that she's lucky to have gotten him.

Doesn't Mind Work

The man doesn't mind work. He doesn't begrudge his family one single luxury that he bestows upon them, but what gets upon his nerves is that his family takes it all as a matter of course, and seems to think it no more than he should do to slave himself to death for them. That's what makes father grouchy and surly around home, and it could all be so easily changed if only the wife and children would tell him daily and hourly how much they admire him, and how grateful they are for his sacrifices. Believe me, many a tired business man would weep for joy if he got even so much as a pat on the head from his family by way of appreciation, such as they bestow on the faithful old carriage nag.

It's the lack of appreciation that makes so many women discontented, and fretful, and disgruntled with home life. And you can't blame them. It is discouraging to spend your life cooking dinners for a man who gobbles them down without ever apparently noticing whether they are good or bad. It is discouraging to pinch, and pinch, and economize for a man, who kicks about the bills, anyway. It is discouraging to try to keep yourself looking nice for a man who never takes a second glance at you. No wonder women get to the place where they ask themselves, "What's the use?" and begin to hunt up time tables to Reno.

But they wouldn't if their husbands would show them any appreciation. There isn't a woman living who wouldn't gladly work her fingers to the bone, and pinch the very buffalo off a nickel in getting the most out of it if her husband would only tell her how much he admired her; and what a grand little manager he thought she was.

There isn't a sacrifice of domestic life that appreciation wouldn't sweeten. There isn't a jar that couldn't be avoided by its use. The difference between a happily married couple and an unhappily married one is that one show their appreciation of each other during life, and the other wait to put it on their tombstones.
